THE KENNEDY STORY

By JOE MCCARTHY
(Third In a Series)

The biggest part of the president's duties, Joseph P. Kennedy believes, is stepping into disputes between the secretary of state and the secretary of defence, or between the secretary of the treasury and the federal reserve system, or other battling government agencies, putting his fist down, and deciding what will be done.

"The president must make his decision calmly and objectively, based on his own careful study of the issues, the senior Kennedy adds, without taking anybody else's word for it and without being influenced by personal feelings.

"Jack has that in him," Joe Kennedy said in November, 1960. "He'll make the decisions on his own knowledge, without letting anybody else do it for him."

Personal Task

If he didn't have that in him, if he was just a nice fellow with a nice way of getting along with people, I wouldn't have voted for him, even if he is my own son."

The confident and independent Jack Kennedy made it plain during his successful campaign that he is going into the presidency as his own boss.

His astonishing drive to the White House was a Kennedy personal operation rather than an enterprise of the Democratic national committee.

In 1959, when the Kennedy-for-president movement was shifting into high gear, this reporter asked the senator if he was planning to engage an experienced Democratic political expert as a campaign strategist.

Nobody Better

Kennedy shook his head and said, "I don't know anybody who can handle this thing better than I can handle it myself."

The Kennedy campaign machinery was operated under Jack's own constant supervision by four young men whose previous experience had been limited to the Kennedy senatorial races in Massachusetts in 1952 and 1958—Jack's brother, Bobby, Ted Sorensen, Lawrence O'Brien and Kenneth O'Donnell.

Many other Democrats worked hard for the cause, of course, but this small inner circle of tried and true disciples from the previous Kennedy campaigns made the important decisions, clearing everything with Jack himself.

Trouble Discounted

Because Kennedy is a lone operator rather than a party politician, he is expected as president to have troubles with Congress. But Kennedy himself doubts this.

He points out that he knows Congress better than most presidents in recent years because he enters the White House from 14 years in the House and the Senate. He also regards himself as a good politician who can talk with politicians in their own language—even if he is not a strong party man.

"Eisenhower had trouble with Congress because he had no taste or liking for the political manoeuvring that you have to use in dealing with legislators," the next president once said. "Somebody once

Smoking in Bed Blamed For City Fire Fatality

KATHERINE SENKBEIL

A fire believed caused by smoking in bed took the life of Katherine Senkbeil, 44, of 169 Beechwood, late Friday afternoon.

It was Victoria's first fire death this year.

The woman, a practical nurse at Mount St. Mary Hospital, apparently perished in her smoke and flame-filled bedroom after she collapsed trying to get to a window.

The tragedy was discovered shortly after 6 p.m. by Donald L. McLarty, the house owner who lived with the deceased, when he arrived home from his shipyard job—carrying a present of a new spring coat.

Entering the gas and smoke-filled house four times in an effort to save the woman, he finally got lost, stumbled and felt his way out then ran a block to pull a fire alarm box at Wildwood and Ross.

"Just the bed was on fire when I first went in," McLarty said today.

He searched in the smoke and could not find the nurse. "The fourth time I went in I got lost," he said.

Electric lights were out because of the fire.

Rescue Attempt on Hands and Knees

On his hands and knees, McLarty tried for the final time to make a rescue.

"I thought I wasn't going to get out again—I felt my way along the chesterfield back to the door."

Unable to use the telephone because of the smoke, McLarty ran to the alarm box. He knew where to find it because there had once been a chimney fire at his house, he said.

City firemen Allan Duval, Lieut. Alfred Perry and Assistant Chief James Robertson went in without respirators as soon as they arrived. They carried the woman to a front porch and administered oxygen to the badly-burned victim.

With firemen working on her en route, police ambulance took her to Royal Jubilee Hospital, where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

Dag Protests

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld has sent a second protest to Belgium for letting Congolese troops operate from the Belgian administered UN trust territory of Ruanda-Urundi, it was disclosed today.

10 Killed In Algeria Vote Clash

ALGIERS (Reuters)—About 10 persons were killed today when Moslems and French troops clashed in southern Algeria where army trucks were waiting to drive Moslems to vote in President de Gaulle's Algerian self-determination referendum.

Moslems voted in large numbers in most areas. Officials said the atmosphere was calm except for the clash in the town of Aflou in which a French soldier and about nine Moslems were killed.

Unofficial reports in Paris said five Moslems were killed Friday, the first of three days of voting on de Gaulle's referendum.

Officials said the insurgent Algerian National Liberation Front (FLN) threatened "bloody" reprisals in the Aflou area toward Moslems who defied its order to boycott the vote.

FLN URGES BOYCOTT

The FLN called on Moslems to boycott voting on the referendum in which a "yes" vote is in favor of de Gaulle continuing his plan to grant Algeria greater autonomy immediately and eventually for Europeans and Moslems to vote on its future political status.

Moslems turned out in strength in many areas today, reports said, but in eastern Algeria their numbers varied widely from one area to another. In Guelma, eastern Algeria, Moslem storekeepers staged a strike today.

Voting was in countryside areas Friday; today it was in small towns. Sunday the voters in Algerian cities get their chance.

Moslem storekeepers in the western city of Oran staged a strike.

Friday's vote has not been tallied, but observers expected the rural population to turn in a large majority for de Gaulle. De Gaulle hopes to gain a massive popular mandate for his program.

PRAYER FOR TODAY

Our heavenly Father, make us conscious of Thy presence every hour of the day. Help us to go among our fellow men, not in sadness and fear, but with cheerfulness and kind faces. Enable us to be a blessing to all those who are fighting a hard battle. In our relations with others may we have more of the wisdom of the Master, Christ, and something of His courage and compassion. In His name we pray. Amen.

SOVIET HALTS AIRLIFT TO LAOS REBEL FORCES

NEW YORK (AP)—NBC said today a senior Soviet diplomat in Bangkok, Thailand, reported that Soviet planes are stopping their airlift to Laotian rebels.

A Bangkok dispatch from NBC correspondent James Robinson quoted the diplomat as saying the airlift is ending because Moscow feels Laotian civil war must be solved by negotiations rather than fighting.

RALLY OPENS MONDAY

Unemployment Main Topic For Liberals

OTTAWA (CP)—A list of proposals for giving the lagging economy a transfusion of pep, including tax cuts and a major urban development plan, are expected to come from next week's national Liberal rally.

Walter Gordon, who will be policy committee chairman at the three-day convention, said unemployment is the main concern of some 400 resolutions that will be considered by party delegates starting Monday.

It would not provide employment immediately since prior planning would be necessary, said Mr. Gordon, who was chairman of the royal commission on Canada's economic prospects several years ago. But that planning should begin now.

Other resolutions call for tax cuts, propose incentives to the establishment of industries in depressed areas—measures which would be more effective than the recent budget proposals of Finance Minister Fleming, he said.

RESOLUTIONS CRITICAL

A number of resolutions were "bitterly critical" of the government for tight money, high interest rates and the recent high exchange premium on the Canadian dollar. All of these, he said, have slowed the country's growth.

Party officials say more than 2,000 delegates and Liberal party supporters are expected to attend the rally at the Coliseum, a venerable red brick building at Lansdowne Park which still holds a pervading odor of horses from the recent Ottawa Winter Fair held there.

The national rally was preceded by the Canadian University Liberal convention in the same building today.

Some 400 students attended from 43 universities and colleges across the country.

Conditional Offer Made

VIENTIANE (Reuters)—The right-wing government of civil-war-torn Laos said today it is willing to consider the revival of a three-nation international commission to help bring peace to the Southeast Asian country.

This international truce supervisory commission for Laos was set up by the 1954 Geneva conference that ended the war in Indochina between French and Communist guerrillas.

The commission, charged with keeping the peace in this tiny kingdom, was adjourned indefinitely in July, 1958. Its three members are India (chairman), Canada and Poland.

Foreign Affairs Secretary Chao Somsana said Laotian approval for a revival of the commission was conditional on agreement by the members of the Geneva conference.

Red Troops Advance On Capital

VIENTIANE (AP)—A column of leftist troops was reported advancing on Luang Prabang today from the north. Reports varied, however, as to whether the Laotian royal capital was imminently threatened.

French sources said the threat to Luang Prabang was increasing. Other Western military men placed the column still 60 miles north of the city and said it was in no immediate danger.

The more optimistic view seemed to be shared by King Savang Vathana. He took off today from Vientiane for Luang Prabang after earlier delays that raised questions about the security of the city.

CLAIM BASE CAPTURED

Information Minister Douvan Norasing claimed today the important pro-Communist rebel base of Vang Vieng, 65 miles north Vientiane, was captured by government forces Thursday.

Front-line officers told an Associated Press correspondent, however, Vang Vieng was still in pro-Communist hands today.

The correspondent drove to front lines midway between Vientiane and Vang Vieng. Government armies appeared to be making little headway in their march on Vang Vieng, which they started three weeks ago.

The king came to this administrative capital to officiate at the formal installation of the rightist government of Prince Boun Oum.

'Retreat' By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has told friendly nations it is willing to accept a broader-based non-Communist government in Laos, including former Premier Souvanna Phouma, provided the move is acceptable to King Savang Vathana and pro-Western Premier Boun Oum.

Top U.S. officials made this known Friday after the Soviet Union was reported to have turned down a British peace formula which would have called for Soviet recognition of the newly-invested Boun Oum government.

(Times News Services)
FLEET, Eng.—A spry, whisky-drinking former actress, 100 years old Friday, began her second century with a gala party at the village hall.

Mrs. Mailla Pratt invited 65 guests to the party she is giving to celebrate her own birthday. She sang them the same songs she warbled as a small-part actress last century at London's famous Drury Lane Theatre.

As the village clock chimed in the new day, Mrs. Pratt raced up the stairs of her house and thrust a Union Jack mounted on a pole out of her window.

Of her birthday plans, Mrs. Pratt said:

"I will smoke a little, say grace myself, and the policeman who will stand at the door to keep the reporters out of the party will come in and have a bit of my birthday cake and a glass of wine."

For herself, Mrs. Pratt expected to imbibe stronger stuff. "I have drunk whisky and soda all my life," she said.

asked Eisenhower if he liked the game of politics.

"He frowned and said that being president was a fascinating experience but that he had no great liking for politics."

Kennedy paused and added, "Well, I do have a great liking for politics. That's the difference—one of the differences—between Eisenhower and me. I also think the Democrats in Congress are becoming more unified now that the South is getting more industrialized and sharing more common problems with the North."

The president-elect has said often that he expects that the 1960s will be a difficult time for the chief executive of the United States.

Problems Growing

"It will be like the time Coolidge gave way to Hoover," Kennedy has said. "All the problems will be coming to a head in 1961 and 1962—changes in weapons, changes in NATO, inflation, and economic problems in the southern half of the globe. The job of the new president will be the hardest since Roosevelt. A greater responsibility will center on the president. He must serve as a defender of the public good and the public interest against all the narrow private interests that operate in our society."

The charge during the campaign that Kennedy was inexperienced in foreign affairs irritated the candidate's father. Joe Kennedy pointed out that back in 1940, when Jack was 23 years old, he wrote a best selling book, "Why England Slept," a highly praised study of Great Britain's lack of preparedness for the Second World War.

Experience Won

"The year before that, 1939, when the war started, Jack was working for me in the Embassy at London," Joe Kennedy said. "Right after war was declared, the Germans sank the British ship Athenia, which had a lot of Americans aboard."

"I sent Jack up to Glasgow, to handle the whole job of investigating the sinking and taking care of all the American survivors. He was only a boy in college at the time. If that isn't experience, I don't know what is."

UPSETS GALORE IN CUP SOCCER

Crewe Ousts Mighty Chelsea

LONDON (AP)—Underdog Crewe Alexandra, a struggling fourth division team, today knocked out mighty Chelsea in the third round of the English Football Association Cup soccer competition—a round that produced upsets galore.

The cup, first played in 1896, is the competition in England that invariably produces surprises. The third round is the one that matches the big teams against the little ones.

Here are some of the shocks this time:

Third division Chesterfield held first division Blackburn to a scoreless tie. Second division Lincoln City whipped first division West Bromwich Albion 3-1. Crewe, a team with little money and small crowds, knocked out first division Chelsea 2-1. Second division Sheffield United defeated first division Everton 1-0. Fourth division Peterborough United defeated second division Portsmouth 2-1. Second division Scunthorpe United crushed first division Blackpool 6-2.

Crewe scored both its goals in the first 30 minutes, winger Ron Stark and Barrie Wheatley notching the points, and held on in the second half to win. Winger Frank Blunstone scored Chelsea's goal just before halftime.

A crowd of about 60,000 saw Sunderland, once rated among the greats but now in the second division, knock out Arsenal 2-1. A goal from centre forward David Herd gave Arsenal a 1-0 lead. Two second-division Lincoln City whipped first division West Bromwich Albion 3-1. Crewe, a team with little money and small crowds, knocked out first division Chelsea 2-1. Second division Sheffield United defeated first division Everton 1-0. Fourth division Peterborough United defeated second division Portsmouth 2-1. Second division Scunthorpe United crushed first division Blackpool 6-2.

Crewe pulled off the biggest surprise of the day.

"The last time we played in London we lost 13-2 to Tottenham," said Crewe manager Jimmy McQuigan. "We just had to do something about it today."

Afro-Asians Form Joint Top Command

CASABLANCA, Morocco (Reuters)—The seven-nation Afro-Asian "summit" conference here today announced the creation of a joint African military command.

A charter drawn up at the conference said an African consultative assembly would be set up "as soon as conditions permit." The document provides also for creation of multi-nation African political, economic and cultural committees.

A final resolution issued after the four-day meeting here said the military high command would be composed of chiefs of staff and would meet periodically to ensure "the common defence of Africa against aggression."

Lumumba Backed as Congo Chief

The conference backed imprisoned Patrice Lumumba as premier of The Congo and said nations participating in the conference reserved the right to take action in The Congo if the United Nations "failed."

It called on the UN to free Lumumba and "disarm and disperse" the forces of Congolese army chief of staff Col. Joseph Mobutu and said that if the UN failed in its prescribed task, the participating nations would withdraw their troops in The Congo.

Five of the conference nations — Morocco, the United Arab Republic, Libya, Mali and Guinea—already have ordered the withdrawal of their Congo troops although none have left. Conference sources said Ghana on Thursday agreed to do so. Ceylon in November said it would withdraw its 11-man token force but later said the decision would be reviewed early in the new year.

Pledging non-alignment of African nations to either power bloc, the charter appealed against the maintenance of foreign bases which "endanger the liberation of Africa."

The conference set up a "liaison office" which is to arrange meetings of experts within three months to implement decisions taken at the conference.

Israel Denunciation Protested

The end of the conference was delayed and conference sources said Ghana, which maintains friendly relations with Israel, would not agree to vigorous denunciations of Israel as desired by the United Arab Republic.

Ghana, in addition, has extended diplomatic recognition to Mauritania, which Morocco claims as part of its national territory.

Moroccan information minister Moulay Ahmed Alaoui told a press conference resolutions on the Congo and other African problems also were drawn up.

The resolution on Algeria said continuation of the insurrection in the North African territory compelled delegates "to reconsider their relations with France."

It called on all countries supporting the Algerian nationalists "to reinforce their political, diplomatic and material aid to the insurgent provisional government of the Algerian republic."

The Afro-Asian states represented at the parley were the United Arab Republic, Morocco, Guinea, Ghana, Mali, Libya and Ceylon. Members of the insurgent Algerian provisional government also attended.

CD Communications Tests Instructive

B.C.'s civil defence and Canadian Army units which Friday jointly tested communications for the first time achieved complete success, officials of the exercise "Co-operation I" said today.

The "alert" sounded at 2 p.m. Thursday and posts were manned at six main centres throughout the province by CD personnel and army communications units.

Headquarters for the provincial exercise was at Keating Crossroad control centre from where communications fanned out.

Headquarters in Victoria were at 1840 Blanshard where 15 officers and a half-dozen other ranks worked on the army side, while three shifts of 20 volunteers each handled CD aspects of theoretical evaluation.

The "alert" received here was that two "enemy" jet bombers, turned back from primary targets in the U.S., dropped five-megaton bombs on the small B.C. communities of Glade and Quesnel.

"We were mainly concerned with the problem of re-entry into the towns which were hit by random bombs," a senior CD spokesman said.

Considering the bombs were 150 times more powerful than the one dropped on Hiroshima and the places obliterated, that wasn't much of a problem.

However, communications dealt with the CD role of getting people out and the army role of re-entry, survivor rescue and decontamination.

Mayor Percy Scurrah and other civic officials inspected the Victoria installations Friday.

Commodore V. S. Godfrey, Greater Victoria target area co-ordinator, said his forces learned a great deal from the operation and discovered other things yet to be learned.

FREEZE ON EXIT PERMITS

Castro Closes the Door To Cubans Seeking Out

HAVANA, (AP)—Premier Fidel Castro's regime cracked down today on Cubans trying to leave the country and gave another indication that a reconciliation with the United States might be possible after President-elect Kennedy takes office.

The government froze issuance of new exit permits for all Cuban and foreign residents but said tourists will not be affected. American residents leaving will not require new permits to leave unless they intend to return.

A Reuters news agency dispatch Friday said Cubans seeking visas had packed the British and Canadian embassies since U.S.-Cuban relations were broken Tuesday. Canadian embassy officials said 60 to 70 Cubans had been lining up daily for visas but none had been issued since the break, pending further orders from Ottawa.

The pitch to Kennedy was made by Ernesto (Che) Guevara, president of Cuba's national bank and architect of Castro's economic policies.

THREE-HOUR TALK

At the same time, Guevara said in a three-hour television speech Friday night that Cuba swapped its 1960-61 sugar crop to the Communist bloc for political considerations. He did not say what the political considerations were.

Guevara emphasized that Kennedy said Wednesday he would not assume responsibility for the breakdown of diplomatic relations until he took office Jan. 20.

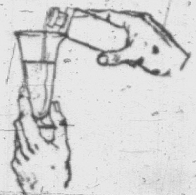

This, Guevara said, is "important" this injects a note of uncertainty on the issue. This means Eisenhower is responsible for all and that there are certain differences

Guevara said Cuba's sale of sugar behind the Iron Curtain after the United States closed its markets was the "result simply of a political action."

LEGION TALKS TOUGH

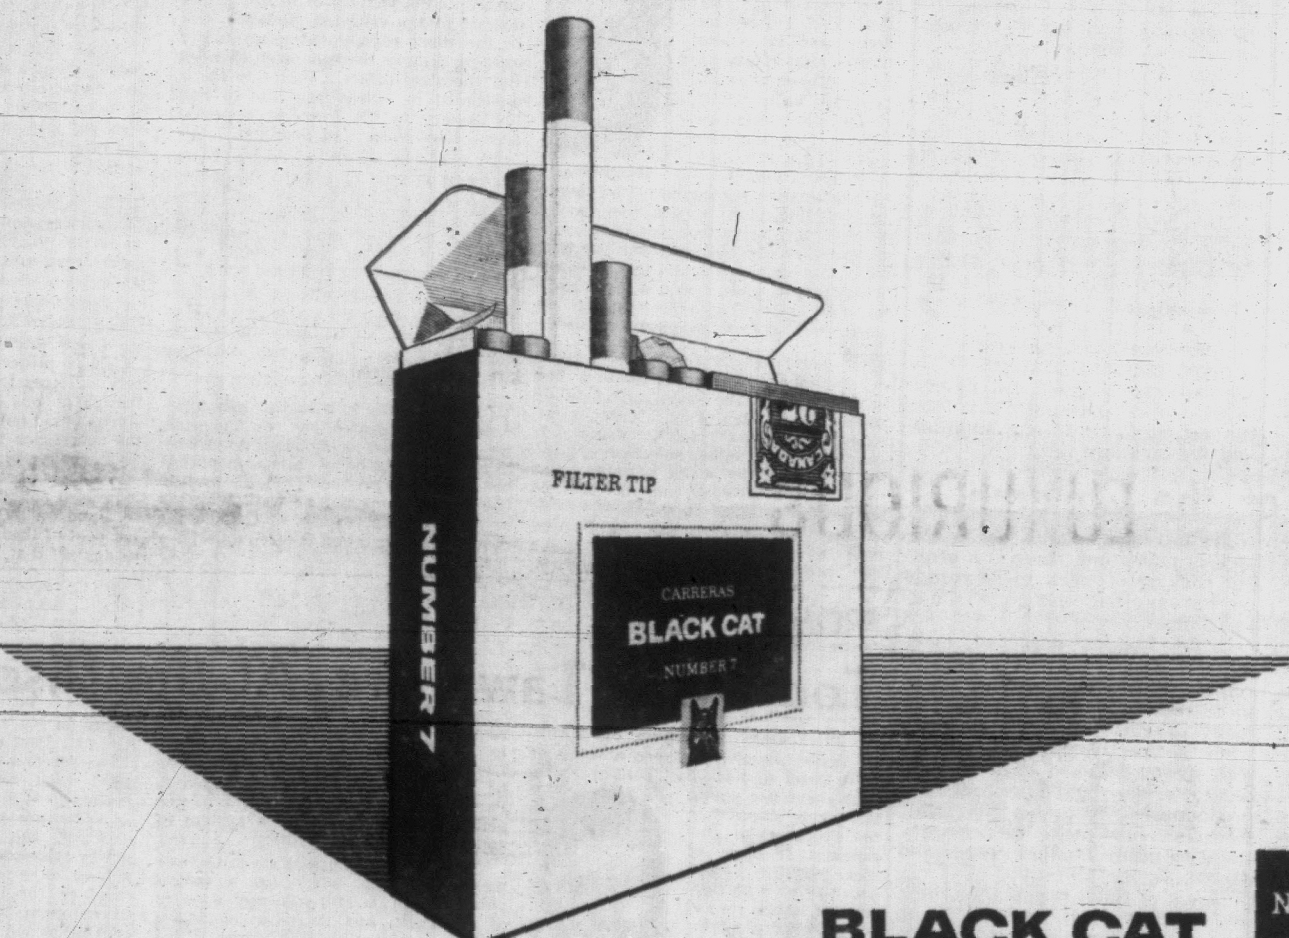

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Western Hemisphere nations should band together to end the Cuban government of Premier Fidel Castro, the head of the American Legion declared here Friday night. "The Fidel Castro regime must be eliminated by all appropriate means—including force if necessary," said William B. Burke of Los Angeles.

Why Are Prescriptions Often Written in Latin?

PERHAPS you have noticed that the prescriptions which your physician writes are usually written in Latin. No doubt you have wondered why. Prescriptions are written in Latin because Latin, a never-changing language, is universally employed in medical practice. A Latin prescription written in America or England can be filled in Puerto Rico, Russia, or France, even though the pharmacist may not know a word of English. On the other hand, no matter where your prescriptions may be written, we can fill them promptly.

From the Grass Roots

THE LIBERAL PARTY OF Canada meets next week in circumstances very different from those of its last convention early in 1958, the year of its defeat.

Since the electoral defeat which soon followed that convention, Mr. Pearson has mastered his party with extraordinary speed and can look forward to an election at any time with confidence. Provincial elections, federal by-elections and public opinion polls all show that the popular support of the Diefenbaker Government has fallen drastically while Liberal strength has been rising.

It is unlikely, under these conditions, that the Government will risk an election before it has to, a year or two from now.

Hence the Liberal convention is free to make plans a considerable distance ahead. It can concentrate on policies, since it is not concerned with its leadership, now in Mr. Pearson's unchallenged possession.

But political conventions by their nature are not fitted to make policies in any detail. At best they can only frame broad principles. For in the swiftly-moving events of politics, at a time of breakneck change everywhere, elected men in Parliament alone are competent and have the right to make day-to-day decisions.

Any detailed plan framed at a convention today may be quite impractical tomorrow. Our history is littered with the debris of political platforms. No party leader can be bound by these declarations, except in the broadest principle. Mr. Pearson wishes to hear from the grass roots of Liberalism but in the end he must make up his own mind on the basis of actual conditions and often with knowledge not available to any convention.

It will be useful, however, to hear the general consensus of "liberal-minded people" next week. On the larger issues of the day—especially the state of the Canadian economy—they may be expected to have views quite different from those of the Government.

The convention will make a grave mistake, however, both in principle and in practical politics as well, if it attempts merely to outbid the Government by offers of electoral bait to the voters.

Anyway, even at the lowest level, it is impossible to outbid a government which will always bid higher. As a typical instance, no sooner had the Liberal Party planned to sponsor a system of medical insurance than Mr. Diefenbaker suddenly announced a royal commission on this subject. This master of the political game never misses a trick.

Nevertheless, there are profound issues on which our two great parties can and should present divergent policies, which is their main purpose.

The Liberal convention will have the chance, above all, to re-assert its belief in abundant international trade against a Government which clearly is moving toward protectionism, the historic Conservative policy. Here is a basic issue on which parties and men can honestly differ.

The Liberal Party should make its position clear beyond all doubt and, we hope, will back Mr. Pearson in his larger objective of a new transatlantic trading community. For without this break-through (as statesmen like Mr. Adlai Stevenson have been saying) there will be little or no chance of solving the economic as well as the political problems of the free world.

Apart from his stand on fundamental issues of this sort, Mr. Pearson's greatest asset is his sense of responsibility, his refusal to make promises that he cannot deliver, his candor in telling the public what social reforms will cost in taxes.

The party convention will be foolish in the extreme, even from the standpoint of electoral success, if it undermines Mr. Pearson's reputation for responsibility by reckless commitments.

There is no easy way out of the nation's present difficulties. The Liberal Party will win, and deserve to win, office again only if it faces the actual facts of our situation, and the facts are hard.

For the Sake of the Children

IN THE SIXTEEN YEARS DURING which she was the child welfare superintendent of this province Miss Ruby McKay helped the department to become known on this continent and overseas as having one of the most progressive and best-run child care programs in existence.

She later saw that program starved and neglected by the present administration, her highly trained staff dwindling as overworked and frustrated workers were drawn to other jobs where their services were recognized, and hundreds of children throughout the province failing to receive the care to which by legislation and humanity they are entitled.

Six months ago Miss McKay tendered her resignation in protest, hopeful that the Government might be stirred to action. Yesterday, with her services terminated at the year's end long before normal retirement date, she revealed the reasons for her courageous step. It is not a pleasant story.

The neglect and parsimony of the Government has largely destroyed an asset which was a credit to the province, and this despite the efforts of many dedicated workers to try to keep up standards. As Miss McKay points out, there is a growing backlog of work to be caught up, but only half enough personnel to do it.

That backlog does not mean merely paper work or impersonal routine; it represents babies placed in "temporary" foster homes for many months (at public expense) while prospective adoptive parents wait for overworked staffs to complete interviews and other necessary preliminaries. It means that staff workers cannot make the necessary visits to needy families, wards and others.

Lack of funds means that there are never enough workers to go round and that quickly trained helpers are taken on staff instead of properly qualified experts. It means that "problem" children cannot receive the special care they require. It means that the Government has permitted what was once a model service to deteriorate.

Surely this cannot be Government policy. Surely it reflects ignorance and lack of policy. The public should demand for the sake of the needy children and its own self-respect, that the Government rebuild what has been destroyed.

Closer on Health

TO THOSE WHO HAVE FOLLOWED efforts to combine health services for the municipalities of Greater Victoria, recent progress to that end is encouraging.

At present there are three public health units operating in the area, one providing service to Victoria, Esquimalt and the Greater Victoria School Board, another serving Saanich and certain other South Vancouver Island territory, the third covering Oak Bay.

Present plans apparently seek the establishment of a metropolitan agency to co-ordinate the work of the three.

This seems a highly desirable development.

Issues of health concern the whole community if for no other reason than that germs refuse to recognize municipal boundaries. When the area can act in concert on any one danger, its prospects of success seem greater.

There is, of course, a natural affinity between all forces seeking to improve physical well-being. Sincere agencies combatting disease, epidemics or dangerous health menaces are engaged in a joint crusade. The closer they can be brought together for the purposes they seek to serve, the better. Combined, their resources should be substantially more effective than when they are used independently.

The Attack on the Gamp

A YEAR OR TWO AGO THE subversive news leaked from London that the British male had become addicted to gaily printed underwear. The morning coat might be dark, the trousers formally striped, but closer to the skin the Englishman indulged a flair for color and sharp design. This was the startling revelation of Monday's wash line.

To those of us who had leaned on the image of the Englishman as a stout fella, solid as a rock, dependable, imperturbable, this small vagary is disturbing.

Now comes another challenge to a fine institution. Certain English umbrella manufacturers are trying to introduce the brightly colored broily in place of the sober, black sceptre which the Londoner carries tightly furled with all the authority of a rod of state.

They'll never make it. The manufacturers can't win. Or can they? That report on the fancy underwear makes you wonder: If the umbrella goes the way of so many other British unchangeables, how long will it be before Regent Street knows the giddy color of Hawaiian shirts worn by the natives of that misty and untropical isle?

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

ALONG Echo Road at Prospect Lake there is a high rock bluff overlooking the water.

The cliff is almost sheer and it is covered with moss. Growing with the moss there are lots of polypody ferns that look like beautiful drapes.

At the top of the cliff there is quite a large Arbutus grove, mostly young trees. With their reddish-brown trunks and shiny leaves they make a beautiful sight, especially when the sun falls on them.

On the lake you can see numerous water fowl, ranging from gulls to some of the little grebes. There are swans which will come into shore if you have anything to feed them.

If you go down to the southern end of the lake amongst the rushes and reeds and stay quiet you can see the muskrats swimming out to one of the tiny islands. Some distance from shore you may see them dive and disappear.

These creatures have their homes in the banks and make bolt holes or escape hatches under water, so that they are able to leave by land or by water.

This area is one of the places where the Redwing blackbird makes its home in the summer.

Along the road can be seen the pussy-willows, with their furry white buds. Close by, the drooping withered heads of the ninebark (Physocarpus capitatus) look foreboding and ragged as if in keeping with the shaggy stems and branches. Growing between them the sword fern (Polystichum munitum) with its sharp pointed fronds and dark green color makes a sharp contrast.

LOOSE ENDS

Britain's Paradoxical, Experimental Carrot and Stick

IN ONE of those narrow Welsh valleys, which used to provide authors with books of social protest and movie producers with a perfect locale for dramas of grimy squalor, the Canadian tourist can see at first hand certain details of the British revolution.

Irony and bitterness wrote that famous line, "How Green Was My Valley," but today the words are exactly true, and the setting of the Rhondda country is all ashine with prosperity. The towns are bustling, the houses are newly painted, the shops full of goods and customers, the people enjoying the best times they ever knew. All this in south Wales which, when I saw it last before the war, crawled with poverty and lay prostrate in a listless despair.

FOR these unbelievable changes there are many national reasons but locally perhaps the most important of them is a decision of state paradoxical, experimental and typically British. It cannot be called either socialism or private enterprise by strict definition but whatever its ideology may be—and no one seems to care—it works.

Successive governments have used both the stick and the carrot to solve two problems simultaneously. First, they were determined to cure unemployment; secondly to redistribute a lop-sided economy. Both objectives were approached by such a law as few Canadians could imagine.

The stick was a drastic regulation forbidding anyone to establish a new industry in the vicinity of dropical London or in the crowded Midlands. Only in the most exceptional cases can an existing factory there be even enlarged. But the state offers a carrot to the industrialist by subsidizing him to build his factory in the formerly depressed areas, like Wales and Scotland.

It would be absurd, of course, to say that this scheme of redistribution, vast and intricate as it is, has built more than a fraction of Britain's present wealth, for that was a many-sided prodigy of strong government, good private management and hard work.

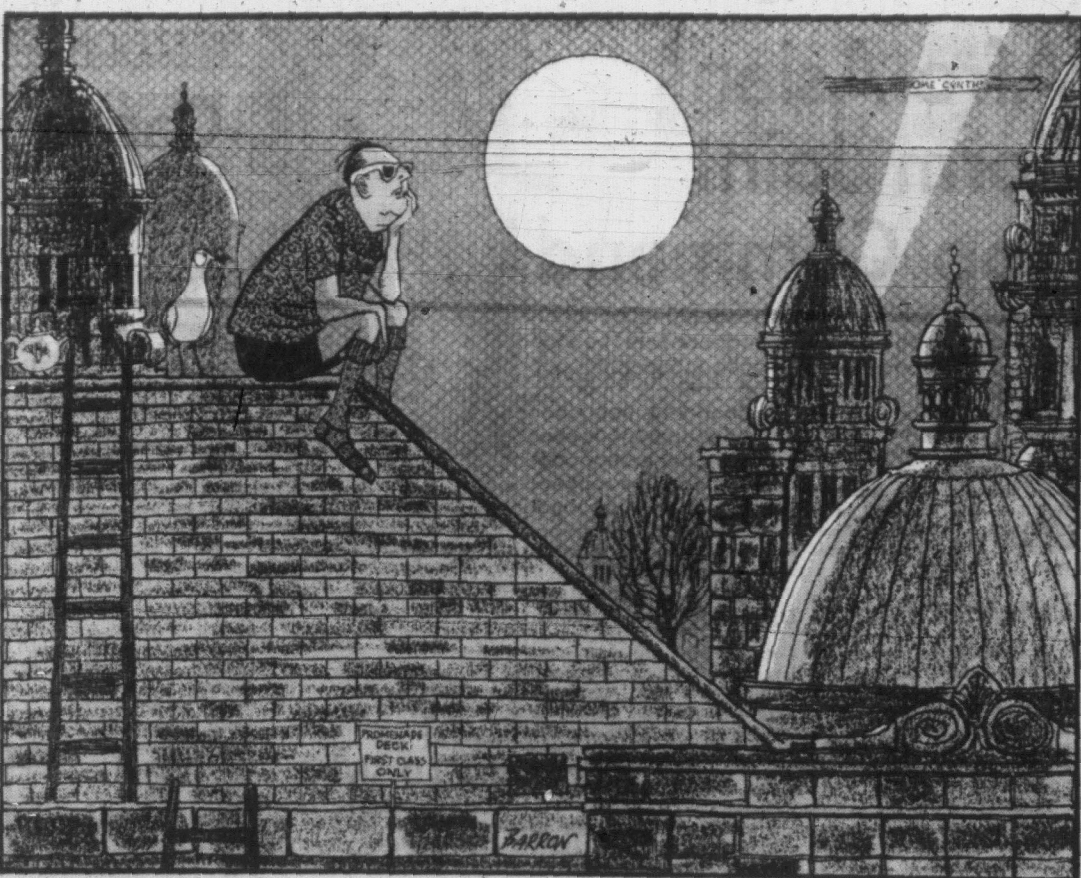

It would also be absurd to say that Canada can mop up its local pools of unemployment by Britain's method because conditions in the two countries are basically different.

IT matters little to a British industrialist if he operates, say, on Tyneside, the Welsh coast or London. Anywhere in a tiny island he is close to a port if he ships his products abroad and to the domestic market as well. Whereas in the far-flung reaches of Canada the cost of transportation is often a decisive factor.

The latest example is one of the most dangerous. It gives the Minister of National Revenue (and here we are speaking of the office, and not any particular individual who may hold that office) wide discretionary powers.

His decisions could spell the difference between bankruptcy and prosperity for hundreds of companies.

These discretionary powers are authorized by a customs tariff resolution introduced by the Minister of Fi-

"... Now, let's see... millions for the Columbia... millions for the Peace... millions for the PNR... millions for roads... millions for... uh... oh yes, and Percy wants another ferry..."

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The location of an industry may make all the difference between success and failure. Besides, we already have, in most industries, more productive capacity than we yet know how to use.

In its compact size Britain enjoys an obvious advantage over us and is using it with intelligence, compromise and an old racial distrust of logic.

Since 1945 the Government has invested about a quarter of a billion dollars in factory buildings which it rents to industries on advantageous terms if they will provide their own machinery and establish themselves where they are needed to use the local labor force.

THE buildings, rented slightly below their economic cost—sometimes with an outright loan in addition—are government-owned and might be called an experiment in socialism but the industries are privately owned, fiercely competitive and managed without any trace of official interference.

These projects of every imaginable sort will cost the state a sizeable sum, though no one knows quite how much since the net outcome must depend upon the success or failure of the industries as a whole.

None has been given a factory unless it seemed sound economically, well able to stand on its own feet. Perhaps ten per cent of them will fail ultimately, but as against that, the successful ones have greatly increased the nation's production, saved incalculable costs in unemployment relief and kept the employed workers happy.

At present the Government has about a thousand separate industrial tenants employing some 200,000 workers, a small but important segment of a labor force numbering 24 millions—important mainly because these industries have been skillfully used to rehabilitate the old distressed areas and relieve the congestion of regions centring on London and Birmingham.

Their congestion is still overpowering and no one can see how to solve it finally, but at least the smell of poverty has left the Welsh valleys and most of Scotland.

IT happened that I first observed a marginal miracle in, of all places, the world's largest gelatin factory, not far from Cardiff, on an "estate" containing two score factories. Here the bones and hides of cattle from India and the ends of the earth were stewed in various acids filling acres of tanks and converted into the stuff of housewives' jelly and a myriad of industrial products.

It seemed odd, amid those huge, steaming vats, to reflect that tonight's dessert in many Canadian homes had its origin in Wales and a state policy devised in London. But stranger sights awaited me.

FROM OTTAWA

Too Many Laws Are 'At the Discretion of the Minister'

A TIREDSOME succession of controversial issues involving elected officials at every level of Canadian politics in recent years has stimulated new interest in the processes of government. In many of these affairs it was shown that laws written by honest men, who believed they would be administered by honest men, gave individuals a measure of "discretionary" power that opened the doors to temptation. This question of individual decision, with no appeal to non-political courts or boards, is one that has long baffled men in public life who try to balance the dangers of discretionary power against the inflexibility and the time-consuming delays, and frequently, the inequities that occur when the law is written in an attempt to fit every conceivable situation.

Generally speaking, parties of the right have illustrated a tendency to allow for ministerial discretion in the formulation of laws; perhaps it stems from the better of the conservative that he has a God-given right to govern. Parties of the left and centre of the political spectrum set up a system of appeals, as a general rule.

The present Conservative Government in Ottawa, which has a radical public image, is still basically a party of the right, and its true colors are becoming increasingly apparent. The phrase "at the discretion of the minister" is showing up to a disturbing degree.

The latest example is one of the most dangerous. It gives the Minister of National Revenue (and here we are speaking of the office, and not any particular individual who may hold that office) wide discretionary powers.

His decisions could spell the difference between bankruptcy and prosperity for hundreds of companies.

These discretionary powers are authorized by a customs tariff resolution introduced by the Minister of Finance in his supplementary budget on Dec. 20. Part of that resolution reads: "The decision of the minister shall be final with respect to the following matters."

What are the "following matters?" First, the minister is given the power to decide whether Canadian companies, or a company, have adequate facilities for the economic production of custom-made machinery within a reasonable period of time.

Custom-made machinery could involve a multi-million-dollar generating unit for a hydro-electric project, or millions of dollars worth of equipment for a new pulp mill. If the minister decides, at his discretion, that a Canadian company is capable of producing such machinery, a higher rate of duty will be slapped on to the imported equivalent.

It is obvious the minister will be called upon to take decisions that will have a good deal of influence on the economic position of many Canadian companies.

Secondly, the minister is given the power to decide what the "normal Canadian consumption" is of a wide variety of shelf goods.

An example will serve to explain: An importer seeks to bring 10 power shovels into Canada. They are not built to the buyer's particular specifications, so they are termed "shelf goods." A Canadian company that makes power shovels complains to the minister. It says it builds "approximately" (and that is the word used in the resolution) the same class or kind of power shovel, and asks the minister to impose a higher rate of duty.

Before granting the protection afforded by the higher duty, the Minister has to be satisfied that 10 per cent of the normal Canadian consumption of that class or kind of equipment is made in Canada. In many cases, no official figures or statistics are available. The minister alone will decide, and, again, there is no appeal from his rulings.

In the case of the custom-made machinery and equipment, there is not even provision for informing the public when a decision has been made.

SOME WONDERFUL STORIES TO TELL

With a Wit That Few Could Emulate and None Surpass

WHEN Mrs. R. W. Braide and Mrs. J. C. Hibbard donated Sickett's "L'Eglise du Polet" to the Art Gallery they did more than provide the permanent collection with its most valuable addition to date; though they cannot have been aware of it, they were restoring contact between me and one of my favorite painters.

When I was an undergraduate there were few days in the week when I omitted to pay a visit to the room in the Ashmolean Museum which housed the small painting called "Ennui," by this masterly painter; and one of the good things that I can remember about a year spent in Vancouver is that it enabled me to see a great deal of the very beautiful Sickett "still life" which is one of the best things in their collection.

As you probably know, Sickett was the son of a painter whose father was also a painter. The grandfather, a Dane, was in the employment of King Christian VIII of Denmark, and Sickett's father showed such infant precocity as a painter that King Christian awarded him a bursary to enable him to study in Copenhagen.

After studying in Paris he married an English girl and worked for the Fliegende Blätter in Munich, where Walter Richard Sickett himself was born. The family moved to England when Walter was eight years old, and Walter's father became a British subject; in so doing he may very well have spoiled his son's chances of winning more than a national reputation.

I say this because Sickett's reputation outside Britain does not stand as high as that of many lesser lights of the Impressionist school, and that this is patently unfair is obvious when one looks at some of the murky daubs by mediocre French practitioners of this popular school, whose mediocrity would be unmasked if more people looked at the painting and fewer at the label.

And yet I somehow doubt if there will ever be a time when Sickett's work will be entirely forgotten. He left too much of a mark on too many people for some of those people were every bit as articulate as Sickett was himself.

Osbert Sitwell said of him: "He was profound; I had seen Sickett as he was, the great artist knelt in the shell of the strikingly good-looking man-of-the-world, armed with a wit that few could emulate, and none surpass; I had seen Sickett, the good host and kind friend to the young; Sickett the 'lion comique,' as Max has shown him, bawling out the comic songs of the seventies and eighties; Sickett, the painter, too deeply absorbed to allow his personality to star for the day in any single one of its particular roles; Sickett, the elegant, with the imperial; Sickett, the Irvingesque actor, producing effortlessly, sonorously, the great speeches from Lear or Hamlet, or quoting Latin to me, passages probably from Martial; Sickett full of common sense; Sickett full of mockery; and finally—and it was among my favorites—Sickett, the chief, in the white clothes appropriate to the day's trade."

This gives you some of the many-sidedness of this remarkable man. He had graduated from London University before he enrolled at the Slade, and it was while he was a student in that famous school that he met Whistler, who said, typically, "You've wasted your money, Walter—there's no use wasting your time too."

So Sickett became Whistler's assistant, apprentice, devil, what you will, and the American dandy (surely the best painter that ever came out of West Point?) cast a spell over Sickett that he never was able entirely to exorcise, even after the inevitable quarrel that everyone had, sooner or later, with Whistler.

Sickett had some wonderful stories to tell, and he told them well. "I once dropped a copperplate I was printing in Whistler's presence. 'How like you!' said Whistler. Five minutes afterwards the improbable happened. Whistler, who was never clumsy, dropped one; himself. There was a pause. 'How unlike me!'"

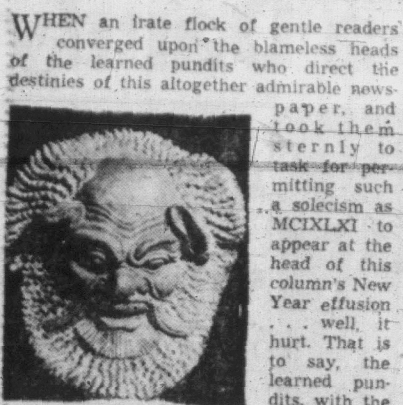

This anecdote, and many others, you will find in the anthology of Sickett's writings on art collected by Osbert Sitwell and entitled "A Free House." If you have more than a passing interest in the painting of the last hundred years you cannot afford to be without this book, which contains some of the best art criticism ever written, in my opinion, even though I cannot see eye to eye with Sickett in all his judgements.

He knew the great French masters well, and had a special veneration for Degas, of whom he gives a brilliant vignette in "A Free House." We learn that Degas "willingly specialized in an imitation of the English method of pronouncing the (French) letter r, making of it something like a soft ch, as 'marche' for maitre."

Degas told of an English painter-triend whose still life of a beefsteak was hung in the Salon. "He would turn blushing, to everyone he met, with the question: 'Avvy voo voo mon 'entree-coat?'" It is to Sickett that we owe the record of two of Degas' most immortal sayings. The first is fundamental to all art: "On donne l'effet du vrai avec le faux."—One conveys the idea of the true by means of the false. The second—but let Sickett tell you himself. "He (Degas) would now and again, in compliment to my nationality, recite the legend that appears to have impressed him most at Brighton: 'Ond please (with great emphasis, and an air of pathetic entreaty) hadjust yure dress biffere leaving.'" practice, deflected the spoken and written into the head of this altogether blame-worthy column and... well, it hurt.

It is useless to attempt to shift the blame any further. Mea culpa, mea culpa, and I don't mind admitting it. However, there is an explanation; and even the sorriest misprint in the Monday police court is entitled to an explanation, let it be however fictitious.

This column, perhaps unwisely, has over the years got into the habit of relying on publishers for its Roman numerals. It is bootless at this point to launch into a consideration of whether or not such a reliance was justified; suffice it to say that in the 40-acre field of journalism, it is the way of wisdom to take careful heed of what publishers have to say.

There is no getting away from it. This is the first and greatest commandment. Publishers of books have little in common with the publishers of newspapers, but the very name after a time becomes a symbol of Authority. And I must confess that here is the pitfall into which I fell.

When in doubt as to how the Ms. Cs, Ls, Vlls and so on were to be arranged, I always consulted a standard work much referred to by municipal engineers and others. Upon the title page, after the title (Sewage Farming for Municipal Corporations) and the name of the author (J. W. C. de P. Sludge, P.Eng., B.Sc., M.R.I.S.E., M.E.E.C., etc., etc.), and a few decorative squiggles in the middle, one came to the meat at the foot. Here was mentioned the publisher (Royalty and Rook Ltd) and the date, in Roman numbers. MCIXLXI.

I don't see how anyone can ever have any faith in Sludge again. Or at any rate, his publishers.

The misfortune of it is that I have always been a great admirer of the Roman system of numbering. The introduction of those wretched Arabic hieroglyphics destroyed, to my mind, the dignity of mathematics in the Western world. How can anything worthwhile come out of such filberty potbooks as 5, 7, 3 or 67 if only we had stood fast, with V, VII, III and VI, the world would not be in such a sorry mess as it is.

Call me a Greek mythtaker if you will. It's better than an Arab thabouteur.

FRIGHTENED?

Nominee Hits Grits

The Liberals are frightened of the New Party, Esquimalt-Saanich candidate Glen Hamilton said today.

He was commenting on B.C. Liberal leader Ray Perrault's call to arms against the new political threat.

Mr. Hamilton, B.C.'s first New Party nominee, accused the Liberals of stealing planks from the New Party platform. Among them: health insurance and nuclear weapons ban.

"Vote-catching devices do not disguise the fact that big business is their sole means of financial support and they can't bite the hand that feeds them," said Mr. Hamilton.

FISHER DECRIED

He also took a swing at CCF rebel Douglas Fisher, who wrote an article against the New Party.

"He is a million miles off base," said Mr. Hamilton.

He said the Fisher article was printed beside a pro-New Party argument in a steelworkers' magazine, but some newspapers had ignored this. "No support for the New Party in Quebec? The Quebec Federation of Labor voted solidly to back us at their last convention and there is a strong intellectual movement behind us there, including support of Gerard Philion, editor of Le Devoir, Quebec's second largest newspaper."

Mr. Hamilton said the New Party can't be compared to Britain's Labor Party.

"It is a Canadian-made instrument for Canadian needs. It's not just a labor party; farmers and professional people all over Canada are forming New Party clubs."

Dag Meets
On Apartheid

PRETORIA (Reuters)—Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd and United Nations Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld today resumed talks on race relations in South Africa. Hammarskjöld is here to carry out the UN Security Council's instructions to ask the South African government to abandon its apartheid policies. The council resolution followed the Sharpeville shooting last March in which 72 Negroes were killed by police.

The prime minister told Hammarskjöld he hoped the secretary-general would "see and hear a lot and gather your own impressions" in South Africa. Hammarskjöld Friday saw a group of Negroes stage a lighting demonstration outside his hotel. The demonstrators whipped anti-white supremacy placards from under their clothing as Hammarskjöld came toward the building. It was announced that Hammarskjöld would go to Cape Town and other unspecified parts of South Africa before resuming his talks with Verwoerd next week.

'Bad News'
By Herter

WASHINGTON (Reuters)—Secretary of State Christian Herter gave a final report to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the world situation which some of its members described as "not very encouraging." The briefing was given at a private meeting of the committee. Senator John Sparkman, Democrat from Alabama, said Herter's review "paints a bad picture."

Russia Helps Iraq

BAGHDAD (AP)—Russian experts are setting up five Soviet-style experimental farms to help revive and expand Iraq's lagging agriculture. With Iraq paying the bills and the Soviet Union supplying some equipment on credit, the Russian technicians are working from Mosul to Baghdad on farms for cotton, grain, rice, herbs and sugar beets. Two are reported to be almost ready to operate.

'Kingdom of Elephants'
A Diplomat's Nightmare

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP)—Laos is a lotus land, a vest-pocket Shangri-La.

A steam-bath atmosphere pervades the country, purging the spirit of go-getting ambition. The people are friendly, indolent, easy-going.

Street scenes are picturesque. In Luang Prabang, ancient religious capital in the north, residents wake to the sound of bells borne by foot-stomping elephants parading before images of Buddha.

Laos is the kingdom of the million elephants. As a cockpit of the cold war, it is also a diplomat's nightmare.

It confronts the West with an explosive situation in an area where the West is extremely vulnerable.

Sharp differences have appeared between Britain and the United States on how to keep Laos safe for democracy. Britain would like to "play it cool." The most that can be hoped for, British officials say, is a neutral Laos, aligned with neither West nor East. Most Western countries, including Canada, go along with the view.

More Per Capita

But the U.S. wants a pro-Western government, and has been pumping millions of dollars into Laos to back regimes that look friendly.

Laos has received more U.S. financial aid per capita than any other country.

Cynics say the money has mainly gone to buy luxury automobiles for a few people at the top. There have been tales of scandal and corruption. So many new cars clot the mud roads that a Canadian diplomat who returned home found Ottawa by contrast full of second-hand models.

The difference in Anglo-American attitudes goes back a long way. When the French empire in Indochina broke up in 1954, Britain and Russia reached agreements designed to neutralize the area. Supervisory commissions staffed by Canada, India and Poland, were set up to keep the peace in Laos, Cambodia and Viet Nam, the three associated states of Indochina.

Spirit Ignored

In the view of most British observers, the U.S. did not observe the spirit of the Geneva agreements. It helped to train the Royal Lao army and backed a series of governments it believed favorable to the American cause.

The agreements had provided that dissident Pathet Lao elements in the two northern provinces of Laos, Phou Saly and Sam Neua, should be "integrated" into the normal life of the country.

The U.S. view was that such soft methods would pave the way for domination of the regime by the Communist-aligned Pathet Lao, a hard core of disciplined men who had always shown a most un-Laotian determination and perseverance.

When the guerrillas came out of the jungles after 10 years of off-and-on fighting, a missionary with 25 years' experience in the country remarked:

"These are not the gentle, happy Laotians I have known for so long. Something terrible has happened to these men."

Tart Comment

The latest scare in Laos, reviving anxiety about "another Korea" and possibly a third world war, has produced tart comment in British newspapers.

"Let's hope that this time the U.S. listens," writes Lord

Lambton in The Evening Standard.

Lambton is an independent-minded Conservative member of Parliament and though he is often critical of Prime Minister Macmillan the two men are probably on the same wavelength this time.

The Guardian says the U.S. has been "notoriously glib" in detecting Laotian crises where none existed.

In fairness to the American view, however, there have been some comments suggesting that neutralism just does not suit the special conditions of the former French colony.

By an accident of geography, Laos is inevitably a pawn in the East-West struggle. Its land-locked 91,000 square miles are enclosed in a hexagon of hostilities.

Of her six neighbors, four are irrevocably committed to the cold war—Communist China and North Viet Nam on the eastern side, Thailand and South Viet Nam with the west. The others, Cambodia and Burma, are fellow neutrals, equally exposed to the cross-currents of the power struggle.

'EASE CURBS
RUSSIA URGED

WASHINGTON (Reuters)—The United States—Friday called on Russia to negotiate the abolition or reduction of travel restrictions maintained by both countries.

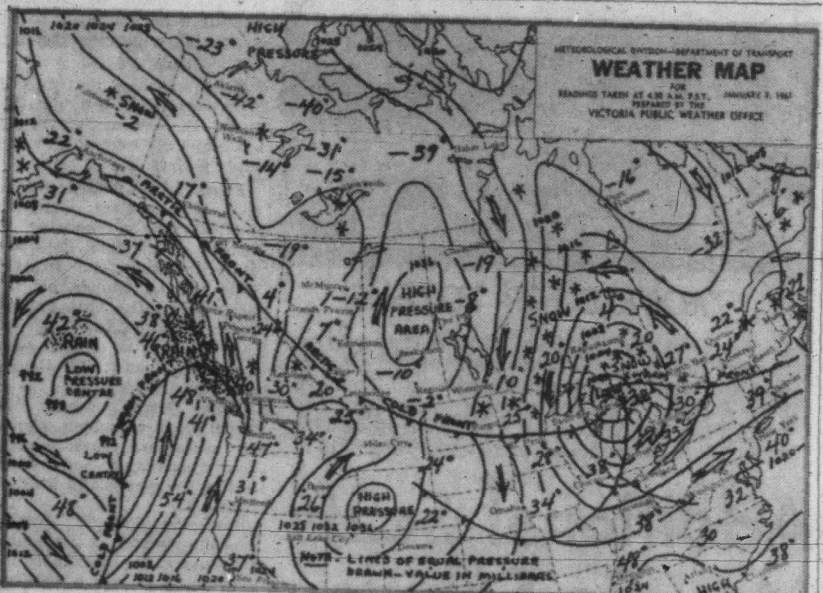

In a note handed to Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov the state department proposed that representatives of the two governments "meet at an early date to discuss this question."

The note said that Soviet restrictions were "in sharp contrast with... the expressed desire of the Soviet government to better relations significantly between the two countries."

"The maintenance of the closed-area system on so large a scale can only contribute to fostering suspicions and promoting tensions."

WEEKEND WEATHER PICTURE ACROSS CANADA

SYNOPSIS—A large storm lies almost stationary off the coast with a series of small storms moving out of the main centre across the coast. There are gales at exposed areas along the outer coast and some strong winds are reported from mainland inlets as air is drawing out of the interior into the low-pressure centre.

Rain from this disturbance will be rather spotty while only occasional light snow is expected at inland points. Temperatures in all areas will remain mild until Sunday when somewhat cooler air will bring partial clearing and scattered showers.

Begins at Home

SIDNEY REVIEW—Following announcements during the course of 1960 by Recreation Minister Earle Westwood that extensive works are planned at McDonald Park and other such areas throughout the province, there is some slight bitterness among the interested residents of this community. The allocation of funds for parks is distributed apparently in direct ratio to the tourist value of the area. A park catering solely to tourists stands at the head of the list. Next in importance is that used largely by tourists. Near the foot is that largely by tourists and left off the list altogether is the park used only by local youngsters.

We love our tourists, but we still have a soft spot for our own children. Perhaps the minister of recreation might find it in his heart during the course of the new year to extend his sympathy to local residents in the various provincial centres and allocate some small funds for these children's playgrounds.

Misses Point

COWICHAN LEADER—With all due respect to its members, North Cowichan council has failed to make a case for not supporting the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce in its bid for relocation of the worst eight miles of Cowichan Lake Road by the provincial government.

The council last week felt its own road needs to be more urgent. If any money was to be spent it wanted first crack at it. This is a most unfortunate attitude and one unworthy of the tradition of co-operation that has been built up here over the years in matters which affect the whole district.

As the worst stretches of the worst eight miles of Cowichan Lake Road are those which pass through North Cowichan municipality, the council's attitude becomes perplexing indeed. One would imagine that the chamber of commerce had asked North Cowichan for a cash grant from the indifference greeting its request.

Dull But Worthy

LADYSMITH CHRONICLE—One rarely reads news reports about families which live within a modest income meeting their bills as they come due, investing a good proportion of their income in things which add to the comfort and convenience of their homes and trying to end each year with a small cash surplus. Such stories are not considered newsworthy, yet everyone knows that if such families ceased to represent a substantial majority in our society, our economic system would collapse overnight.

Newsworthy or not, this was substantially the kind of story which village commission chairman Len Ryan had to tell at the end of 1960, substituting the community of Ladysmith for a family in this particular context. The Ladysmith family during the past year lived within its modest income, met all its obligations as they came due and invested a substantial portion of its income in capital works which added to the comfort and convenience of the community, and the Ladysmith family, ended the year with a small cash surplus.

SIDELINE SLANTS

BY

Doug Peden

For a guy who thought he had turned his back on a hockey career just over three years ago, Gerry Goyer is cutting some mighty capable capers in the Western Hockey League.

Going into tonight's game with Vancouver Canucks, the rangy Victoria centre has accumulated 34 points in 31 games, balancing the record evenly with 17 goals and 17 assists. That hardly rates as an earth-shaking accomplishment, because nine WHL snipers are travelling at a faster clip.

But it becomes a lot more impressive when it is noted that 15 goals and 14 assists have come in Goyer's last 20 games, which makes the six-two, 185-pounder one of the hottest pieces of scoring machinery in the eight-team circuit.

Along with the upsurge in point production has come new poise and efficiency. One of the slickest stick-handlers in the loop, the sophomore centre is handling the puck with more assurance than ever. He's also checking with more authority, battling harder for the puck and making better use of a quick shot that sometimes catches goalkeepers napping.

In fact, it looks as if Goyer, at 24, may be just arriving as a hockey player.

And it could be more than coincidence that the brighter nights started along about the time Memorial Arena railbirds began tossing cheers instead of jeers at Goyer. Away to a slow start with just two goals and three assists in 11 games, Goyer was continually needed by rinkside patrons.

Then, as Bill Saunders arrived to fit like a glove on a line with Goyer and George Ford, the plays started to click, the tune from the seats changed and Gerry's hockey sun started shining.

"I know I had a poor start," says Goyer, "and when the fans were riding me, I tried to play harder, but things just wouldn't go right. When they encouraged me, I got more confidence."

"Confidence is a big thing. Now I feel I can carry the puck without having to worry about losing it and I seem to be shooting more."

"Fan reaction means a lot," he said. "I have to smile at players who say they don't care what the fans say. Any player goes better when the fans are with him."

But the big guy gives most of the credit for his climb up the scoring ladder to his linemates.

Helped Macs to Allan Cup Triumph

"I have to have good wingers," he said, "and Ford and Saunders take the pressure off me. They both know what to do with a pass and are sharp around the goal. They've made the difference."

Goyer, whose long strides sometimes make him appear a slow skater, has a solid booster in Ford. "He has good hockey sense," says George. "He handles the puck well enough and long enough to give you a chance to get into the clear. Gerry studies the guys he plays with to know what they're liable to do. He has a good touch with a pass and is a better skater than most people think."

That's quite a hunk of praise for a fellow who thought he had come to the end of his hockey trail in the summer of 1957 after two seasons with Guelph Biltmores in the Ontario Junior circuit.

In his first campaign at Guelph, Goyer collected 27 goals, attracted considerable attention and was placed on the negotiation list of Montreal Canadiens. His last junior season was a flop. Hampered by an injury early in the season, he managed only 18 goals, the Canadiens lost interest, and the lanky kid headed for his home town of Belleville in search of a steady job.

At the start of the next season he was talked into turning out with Belleville's senior MacFarlands and tagged along as a part-time winger. Then came a practice session when coach Hildebrand worked him in the pivot position. Gerry took to the centre spot like a co-ed to a mink coat and has been there ever since, helping MacFarlands to an Allan Cup triumph and collecting 90 points with Kelowna in the Okanagan loop the following winter.

They Say Gerry's Too Slow for NHL

Goyer started last season with Seattle Totems. He managed only eight goals in 51 games before moving to the Cougars, getting seven goals for the Cats in 20 regular games and five in the playoffs. With this season four games short of the halfway point, Gerry is only seven points shy of his total for last season.

Married, with three youngsters, Goyer is a thrifty young man who would be happy to stay in Victoria and hopes to eventually find employment where he could increase his knowledge of the lumber business.

"Would he like to play in the National League?" "Who wouldn't," he said. "But I haven't got it much serious thought. Ever since I was 14, people have told me I wasn't fast enough to play professional hockey. Now they tell me I'm too slow to play in the NHL. Anyway, I like it here."

It might be mentioned that while Andy Hebenton was toiling for the Cougars, a lot of people claimed Handy. Andy was too clumsy a skater to play in the NHL. Hebenton, now in his sixth season with New York Rangers, promptly proved them wrong when he got his chance.

"Anybody," suggests Ford, "who thinks Gerry can't move should just try keeping up with him."

BIG RED RIDING HOOD

Coach George Agar isn't suggesting that Red Johansen needs speedier method of transportation for tonight's hockey game against Vancouver at Memorial Arena. Pulling starting cord to get Cougar centre rolling, Agar just wants to show off go-kart that will be feature prize for "Kids' Gift Night" at arena Tuesday. Prizes at game against Spokane also include bicycle, 12 autographed hockey sticks and football autographed by Edmonton Eskimos. Gift night certificates are available from city merchants and must be exchanged for hockey tickets by youngsters at arena by 5 p.m. Monday. (Times Photo by Bill Halkett.)

GOPHER DEAN COMPLAINS

Five Days at Bowl; Five Minutes in Lab

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—A dean at the University of Minnesota has criticized the university's involvement with the Rose Bowl football classic.

Dean Athelstan Spilhaus of the Institute of Technology said in an interview that there is something wrong with education when seven members of the board of regents "spend five days to see the Rose Bowl but can seldom spend five minutes looking at one of our laboratories."

Spilhaus is a member of the University Senate that has opposed the Big Ten Conference's tieup with the Rose Bowl.

He said the university's prime concern ought to be with good students, and if they also play football, fine. Subsidization of athletics had brought into the colleges some students who shouldn't be there.

Minnesota's Gophers were beaten 17-7 by Washington Huskies in the Rose Bowl last Monday at Pasadena, Calif.

Belisle's Goal Beats Buckaroos; Totems Connect

Vancouver Canucks are back sharing the first and favored rung in the Western Hockey League, and now that Danny Belisle's back, their chances of moving ahead seem brighter than ever.

Belisle, back after a brief stint with New York Rangers of the National League, will attempt to prove his value to Vancouver for the benefit of Victoria Cougar fans tonight.

Vancouver, tied with Calgary for the lead, tackles the Cougars in Memorial Arena, at 8:30, while the Stamps entertain Seattle Totems. In the only other game of the night, Winnipeg Warriors visit Spokane.

BUCKS BEATEN

Belisle accentuated his value before Vancouver fans Friday night, scoring the winning goal as the Canucks edged Portland Buckaroos 4-3.

A near-capacity crowd of 5,018 went wild when Belisle smashed in his 14th goal in 16 games with Vancouver this season. It was his seventh game-winning goal of the season, a league high.

The win marked the first time this season that Vancouver has defeated Portland.

Other Vancouver goals were scored by Larry Popelin, Bruce Caymichael and Orland Kurtenbach.

Buckaroos' goals came from Bill McCulley, Arnie Schmutz and Art Jones. Schmutz and Jones each scored their 100th goal of their careers within a minute-and-a-half in the third period to put Portland ahead 3-2.

But Kurtenbach gave Vancouver a tie 30 seconds later, scoring from a wild scramble, and at 17:05, Belisle grabbed Popelin's relay and rifled a quick shot past Portland goalie Don Head.

The rookie Portland goalie was a standout all night, stopping 34 shots. He came out of his net in favor of an extra forward with 40 seconds remaining in the game, but Buckaroos failed to score.

After emerging from an eight-game losing streak Wednesday night, Edmonton Flyers slipped right back into it again Friday dropping a 4-1 decision to Seattle before 3,200 Edmonton fans in the night's other game.

TWO FOR TOM

Tom McVie scored his 16th and 17th goals of the season to pace Totems. Singles were added by Marc Boleau and Rudy Filion. Edmonton's lone goal was scored by Ed Joyal early in the second period after Seattle had gone ahead 3-0.

Several lineup changes added to the game with the return of Edmonton winger Ed Diachuk to action after playing with the parent Detroit Red Wings of the NHL. Coach Keith Allen of Seattle moved forward Gerry Leonard back to defence to replace injured Gord Sinclair, who was hurt Wednesday. Leonard's spot was filled by Owen Malley of the Junior Edmonton Oil Kings.

TROUBLE FOR TOTEMS

Despite close attention from Victoria High players, Richard Beal of North Saanich still manages to get shot away during high school basketball jamboree Friday night. Vic High players are Ollie Goldsmith (21), Neil Worboys (3) and John McKeachie (25). North Saanich went on to upset Totems 15-9.

Additional Seats May Be Solution To Lone Problem

By RON SUDLOW

The Victoria Basketball Commission may have its troubles luring customers out to regular league attractions, but the high school set doesn't appear to be bothered by the same ills.

If fact, the only school problem is one of accommodation.

An estimated 1,500 students jammed into the Central Junior High gym Friday and more were turned away. That virtually assures the students that their high school jamboree will be an annual affair.

Granted, they weren't regular league games, but the disease of enthusiasm does have a habit of spreading rapidly.

UNDERDOGS' DAY

It should catch on easily in schools with lightly-regarded teams. The jamboree proved a boon to the underdogs in games that lasted only eight minutes.

Little North Saanich routed the highly-touted Vic High Totems 15-9, for example, and Esquimalt Dockers, unbeaten prior to Friday night, lost three of their four games. Only Oak Bay, tied with Dockers for the lead in the city inter-high league, stayed in form.

Oak Bay's four straight successes sparked division "B" to a 138-135 victory over division "A." The "B" group consisted of Mount View, Victoria, Oak Bay and St. Louis College while Esquimalt, Royal Oak, Belmont and North Saanich formed the "A" field.

BAY BEST

Team scoring honors went to Oak Bay by a slim, one-point margin over the Totems, 44-43. Royal Oak followed with 41.

Dale Koenig of Belmont Braves, Jim Cunningham of Royal Oak and Oak Bay's Barry Entwistle shared individual honors, each hitting for 15 points during the night.

Palmer Provides Shocker

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Ted Kroll, who hasn't won a big golfing event in four years, entered the second round of the $45,000 Los Angeles Open today 11 strokes ahead of Arnold Palmer, who probably can't count his victories during the last four years.

Kroll was also in front of everybody else, but not by much. His five-under par 66 left him one stroke up on three other golfers.

Palmer, 31, United States open and masters champion in 1960, took a shocking 12 strokes on his final hole Friday. He fired four straight balls out of bounds on the 508-yard, par-five hole. Palmer ended up with 33-44-77.

Kroll held a slight edge over Bob Goalby, Bill Collins and Eric Mott.

Billy Casper, former National Open champion, shot a 71, while last year's winner, Dow Finsterwald, had trouble hitting the greens and finished with a 73.

But the Palmer blow-up was the stunner of the round. He came up to his last hole one under par. It was a par-five, 508-yard hole.

His drive from the tee was good, straight down the fairway. But something happened.

OVER BLEACHERS

Using a wood, Palmer sent two straight shots out of bounds to the right in the adjoining practice range. Then his next two shots flew to the left, over the temporary bleachers and onto a street that runs alongside the fairway.

So the distressed Palmer finally reached the edge of the green in 10 blows. It took two more to get the ball into the hole.

Was this his worst experience?

"I can't think of a worse one," Palmer conceded.

Bill Ezlinick, former Winnipegger now playing out of North Reading, Mass., coupled two rounds of 35 to end up with a 70. Stan Leonard of Vancouver, went 38-34-72.

SELLOUT AT TWICKENHAM

Springboks Keep Record Intact

TWICKENHAM, England (AP)—South Africa defeated England 5-0 in a Rugby Union international match here today and kept intact its 54-year unbeaten record in internationals in the United Kingdom.

The Springboks held the upper hand throughout most of a gruelling game before a sellout crowd of 70,000.

The game was decided three minutes before half-time with a great try by Doug Hopwood, converted by Freddy du Preez. England piled on the pressure in the last 10 minutes in a desperate effort to snatch the game out of the fire. But South Africa held on.

The South Africans also have defeated Wales and Ireland on the present tour. Next month they face France, who today crushed Scotland 11-0.

In Paris. The South Africans are due to play Scotland in two weeks.

A brilliant move led to South Africa scoring three minutes before half-time.

The South Africans cleverly wheeled the England defence out of position. Hopwood took a short pass from Johan Claassen and lived over the line for a try a few yards from the corner.

The South African pressures increased after half-time and only gallant defending by England kept the score down.

Fans showed fantastic enthusiasm for the game. Twickenham officials sent back $66,000 ($184,809) to fans who could not get seats.

Before the game scalpers were trying to sell 11 tickets at £10.

CURLERS' CORNER

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Two of the five Vancouver Island men's district curling championships are still up for the taking, but the final field for the five-rink zone derby should be declared by Sunday night.

At Alberni, Jules Wenzel and Bob Cummings lead the round-robin Alberni Valley Club playoffs with identical 4-1, won-loss records and each with two games to play. Barring a playoff, the Alberni district standard-bearers will be known late Sunday night.

Also scheduled to the declared Sunday will be the Comox Valley winners. Rinks skipped by Joe McLure, Grant MacDonald and Len Allen finished in a tie at Courtenay and will stage playoffs tonight and Sunday.

Declared earlier for berths in the Island final at Duncan Jan. 21 and 22 were four-somes skipped by Tony Gutoski of Victoria, Freddie Duncan of Duncan and Nanaimo's Don MacRae.

It appears as if all Island finalists may meet at least once before the zone final. They'll get their warmup licks in Duncan's annual bonspiel Jan. 12-13. Duncan and MacRae have already submitted entries and Glen Harper is waiting for the definite "yes" from Gutoski.

Harper says invitations will be issued to the other district champions if they are known by Monday night, the deadline for entries. A total of 32 rinks, eight less than the limit set, have already entered.

Dick Pick, a vice-president of the Victoria club, could be blamed for passing the curling bug on to other members of his family, and it could be safely said that he did that very neatly. To wit:

Wife Edith and son Roger both will be members of rinks participating in Island finals.

Dick, it must be reported, will get to the finals only as a spectator.

Roger, who walked off with the top honors in the Pacific Coast Curling Association's junior bonspiel at Vancouver during the festive holidays, is skipping Victoria's high school boys' champions.

Edith throws third rocks for Flora Martin, who Friday clinched Victoria's berth in the ladies' final also scheduled for Duncan Jan. 20-22. Mrs. Martin, last year's representative, has Mrs. A. V. "Scotty" Smith and Betty Hodgson as the other members of her rink.

The Martin foursome defeated Mrs. Rene Robbins, representing the Afternoon Ladies' Club, and Commercial's Florence Eches in the three-rink round-robin.

Courtenay's Ruth Kobierski and Marg Fuller of Nanaimo, a former Western Canada champion, are the only other skips to have successfully clinched berths in the women's Island playdowns. Play is still in progress at Duncan and at Alberni.

Roger Pick will run into an old foe when his boys' rink picks up rinks in the school finals. Representing Alberni is a rink skipped by Wayne Reid, defeated by Pick in the final of the Coast bonspiel. Albert Boy will skip Nanaimo's schoolboys while the representatives from Courtenay and Duncan are still undecided.

Boys' Island final will be staged at Courtenay Jan. 13 and 14.

SWEEPING UP LOOSE STRAWS: Unbeaten champions of the annual senior men's bonspiel at the Victoria club was the quartet consisting of Dick Thompson (skip), Jack Gabriel, Stew Skillings and Tom Alexander. Thompson defeated Heb Seller's foursome in the main event final. "B" honors went to Harvey Challenger's rink which also included Alex Anderson, Bill Phillips and Walter Camp. Nanaimo's popular mixed bonspiel, set to roll Jan. 27-29, has already attracted 25 rinks. Limit is 32.

Social curling, proving extremely popular with members and non-members alike, resumes tonight with a mixedspiel. Beginners have their fling next weekend.

A Victoria Press Ltd. rink leaves Wednesday for Edmonton and the third annual Canadian Newsmen's Bonspiel. The two-day event starts next Friday. The title-seekers from Victoria are Jim Tang, Bill Walker, Stu Kidd and, uh, Fedoruk.

BOWLING

Finger Lift
By LOU CAMP
BPA Double Champion

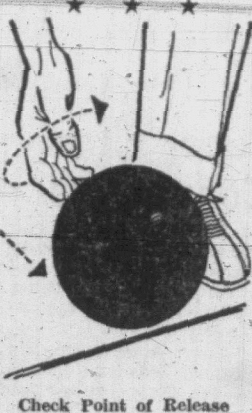

Have you ever noticed sometimes that even though your ball is diving into the 1-3 strike pocket consistently, you are still leaving pins—notably the 4, 7 or 10?

Impossible splits such as the 8-10 or 7-9 are even worse.

If you are experiencing this difficulty, as I do on occasion, first check your finger lift technique at the point of release. Your ball may be lacking good finishing drive when it enters the pin area because you are releasing it from the thumb and fingers simultaneously.

The correct method in applying the proper rolling spin is to have the thumb leave the ball a split-second before the fingers.

Only the middle and ring fingers can give the ball English that really scatters all the pins on a pocket hit.

Operators Aiming For Fivepin Unity

By MICHAEL ROSE

The disadvantages of living on an island are showing up in fivepin bowling circles.

Up to now, complain Vancouver Island lane operators, the B.C. operators' association has largely ignored them because of a number of reasons.

Among these are travelling and communication difficulties and the lack of a unified Island branch of the provincial group.

The latter problem is expected to be dealt with at a meeting of Island operators Jan. 15 at Nanaimo's Pigny Lanes.

No criticism of the B.C. body is intended by the operators, but they feel a solidly-organized Island body would be of greater benefit to the sport than the current haphazard situation.

Turning to tenpins and a vignette from the festive season: It seems the Queen's Printers gang were having a holiday session at Aurora Lanes Dec. 30. All seemed to be in high humor, so much so that one member of the group decided no one had noticed a fatal 8-10 split.

The otherwise honest kegler pushed the re-set button and prepared to bowl into a full set. Unaware that the entire affair had been watched by others, he delivered his ball and watched in agony as it split the pins for a second 8-10 split.

That's the lesson for today, children. Don't fool with fate.

SPOTTING PINS: Charlie Cowie set a precedent at Aurora this week by rolling the first "Dutch 200" game on the alleys. It was worth $5. A "Dutch 200" consists of an entire game composed of alternate strikes and spares. Consistent Alvin Lowe topped junior keglers at Aurora again this week with 554 (202), followed by Ewe Stuedner with 506. Dick Lapp established a new high fivepin mark for the season at Esquimalt with a 425 game. Dave Allan, 763 (343), and Ross McKinnon, 792 (320), had big games at the Strath. Emilie Liska, 782, and Charlie James, 756, topped Esquimalt trundlers in the abbreviated week of play while Keith Todd, 785, and Bob Haime, 751, were best at Gibson's.

Andy Nelson, Richie Lou and Harry Taylor all rolled over the 600 mark in tenpin games this week. Cec Loughton and Gladys Work were the best winners in Gibson's doubles tournament, rolling 1,148 to win $75 in the mixed event.

SOCCER LEAGUE EXPANDING

No Selling Job Needed Now

NEW YORK (UPI) — The International Soccer League, which started last year with little outside encouragement, did so impressively in its first season that in 1961 it has an eager entry list of 15 nations, with at least six more anxious to get in.

"This is the greatest people-to-people sports program anywhere in the world," said William D. Cox, founder of the league and president of the New York team. "And it was organized without any help from the federal or local governments."

"Last year we had to sell our league to the prospective entrants, talk them into competing. This year, clubs everywhere are anxious to play."

LEAGUE EXPANDS

Cox already has been forced to expand his league. Last year there were six teams in each of the two sections. This year there will be eight. The first section plays May 17 through June 18, and the second section in July. The two section winners then meet in a two-game American Challenge Cup final Aug. 3 and 6.

The Canadian team, Concordia of Montreal, plays in both sections and some of the league games will be in Canada. The other seven teams in the first section are last year's second-half and cup champion: Bangu of Brazil; first-section champion Kilmar-nock of Scotland; Besiktas of Turkey; New York; a German team yet to be chosen, and the Argentine champion, Independiente of Buenos Aires; if it can arrange its league schedule to allow the trip to New York.

In the second section will be Rapid of Austria; Red Star of Yugoslavia; Barcelona of Spain; an Israeli team; a Czech team; an Italian team; and a team either from France or from the south of Ireland.

OTHERS ASKING "I had enquiries from at least six other nations," Cox said.

Each team is guaranteed $17,500 total for its seven games in the round-robin section play, and the champions will get $4,500 for each of the two playoff games. For the players themselves, Cox is importing a "social director," Ilsa Schmidli of Switzerland, who speaks seven languages.

Vikings Get Away On Winning Note

Victoria College Vikings started the year off on the right foot with a solid 75-44 win over Victoria Optimist Juniors in exhibition basketball action at the college's Gordon Head gym Friday.

Mike Solstice tossed in 23 points for the Optimists, nine of them from the free throw line in contributing over half of his team's total. Leading the collegians was Darrell Lorimer, with 21 points, trailed by Barry Sadler, with 13.

Vikings' victory was very much the result of close teamwork and accurate passing. In interception of Optimist passes and good marksmanship from the free throw line helped the Vikings to run up a good lead in the first quarter and maintain it throughout the game.

Scores: Vikings: Littleton 8, Lorimer 21, Sadler 13, Brew 8, MacIntyre 10, Blake 12, Rattray 2.

Optimists: Wilson 10, Spotswood 7, Solstice 23, Barnes 5, Gubbels 2.

Wilson Likes U.S. Chances For '68 Games

LOS ANGELES (CP)—Los Angeles has a good chance of being the site of the 1968 summer Olympic Games, says Tug Wilson, president of the United States Olympic committee.

Wilson said the swing is toward the U.S. for 1968 and the probable city is Los Angeles.

"The Russians are talking about Moscow, and Buenos Aires and Mexico City also have shown interest. However, I have an idea the international Olympic committee would lean to the United States. Europe has had the games three out of the last four times."

Canadians Asked To Talks on Aged

WASHINGTON (CP)—Twenty Canadian observers have been invited to attend the four-day White House conference on old-age problems which opens here Monday.

Estimated to cost about $2,000,000, the conference likely will see about 2,700 delegates from all parts of the United States dig into the problems of elderly citizens and suggest how they can best be solved.

Biggest and most controversial issue is the question of health insurance for the aged and how to pay for it. One delegate, Professor Wilbur J. Cohen of the University of Michigan, has charged that the conference is stacked in favor of business and medical interests opposing compulsory insurance.

President-elect Kennedy has proposed that compulsory insurance for the aged be paid out of higher social security taxes. President Eisenhower and Vice-President Nixon have opposed this, suggesting a voluntary system. This was a big issue in last November's presidential election campaign.

DOCTORS TO FIGHT

The American Medical Association has given notice it will fight Kennedy's proposal with every means possible.

Among the Canadians invited are Dr. E. A. Watkinson, principal medical officer of the federal health department's environmental health division; Ian Campbell, national coordinator of the federal labor department's civil rehabilitation branch, and Dr. J. N. Crawford, director general of federal veteran affairs treatment services.

Other observers: Lola Wilson, Saskatchewan health department, Regina; Professor James E. Clare, University of Manitoba, Winnipeg; H. P. E. Holmsted, Canadian Red Cross, Toronto; Marie Hamel, secretary aging committee, Canadian Welfare Council, Ottawa, and Dr. Ian Macdonald, Canadian Medical Association, Toronto.

BRIDGE RESULTS

Winners of the annual New Year charity tournament of the Victoria Allmasters Duplicate Bridge Club were:

North-South: 1. Tony Marsh, Les Stewart; 2. Elizabeth Warren, Jack Goldie; 3. Simon Marinker, Gordon Rodger; 4 and 5 (tied), Laura Tingley and Walt Wallen, Ethel Cleworth and A. L. Jorgensen.

East-West: 1. Robert LaPage, Dennis Walton; 2. Phil Hagel, Otto Leemont; 3. Lillian LeButt, Dick Lipsey; 4. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Duprau.

Receipts will go to the bridge club's 1960-61 charity, the B.C. Mental Health Association.

Funeral on Tuesday For Veteran Chinese

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m. at McCall's chapel for Hiam Chung, one of the most respected citizens of Victoria's Chinese community, who died here last Thursday. He was 84.

Mr. Chung immigrated here from Canton in 1902 and took an active part in raising funds for the Chinese Republican party which overthrew the Manchu Dynasty in 1911.

Prior to the revolution, Mr. Chung was one of the first Chinese citizens to cut his "queue" which were worn by all male members of the Chinese community at the time. The queue was introduced by the Manchus as a symbol of servility to the dynasty.

MET GREAT LEADER

Later he met Dr. Sun Yat-sen, one of China's great statesmen, when he visited Victoria.

Arriving in Victoria at a time of race riots, Mr. Chung worked to bring about a better understanding between occidentals and orientals. He was a strong supporter of the Chinese public school and believed in a dual education—English and Chinese—for his children.

From 1912 to 1930, he operated a tailor shop on Cormorant. He gave this up in favor of a greenhouse nursery business.

He is survived by the widow, Hon Sze, 4168 Torquay Drive; four daughters, Mrs. Charles Lum, Calif.; Mrs. A. G. Wong, Mrs. Glen Kong, both of Vancouver, and Miss Marilyn Chung at home; four sons, Dr. Wallace Chung, Vancouver; Yuen, Batlocke and Batlang in Victoria; 10 grandchildren and one brother, Chung Chuk-ho of Victoria.

Esquimalt Municipal Hall, Jan. 20th, 1.30 - 3.30 p.m.

Persons who obtained their first and second shots in May and June are reminded that they must now obtain their thirds in order to complete the series.

ESQUIMALT EXPECTS AID WITH ARENA

Esquimalt taxpayers can look forward to a possible $100,000 saving in the cost of their new sports arena through the winter works program, under which the federal and provincial governments pay 75 per cent of the labor costs.

At the moment, it is estimated the labor costs for the whole $100,000 project will amount to about $150,000. Completion date for the arena has been set for June 1, however, while the deadline for winter work is April 30.

The contractors, Farmer Construction Ltd., said Friday that the greatest part of the arena structure will be completed by April 30 although work will continue for several weeks after that time.

PRESIDENT of secessionist Katanga Province in the Congo, Moise Tshombe, is scheduled to arrive in Montreal Tuesday on the first leg of a 10-day visit to North America. He will spend three days in Quebec.

PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE

Parking Meter Talk Asked

City public works committee Friday decided to ask police commission to a special meeting to resolve a dispute between the two departments on parking meters.

Police commission sent to the committee a report claiming some 140 meters easily could be squeezed in to unused spots along downtown curbs.

In a detailed reply, city engineer J. C. Garnett said about 120 of the suggested meters would violate provincial or city regulations, contradict council policy or create traffic hazards.

He added that the city still has almost 400 meters installed in downtown locations where they shouldn't be due to provincial regulations or traffic safety.

Further information can be obtained from Matt Yole, director of Leadership Training for the Jaycees, at EV 2-5397.

Dr. John S. Conway, associate professor of history and international studies at the University of British Columbia, will address the United Nations' Association, Victoria branch, in the public library on Monday, Jan. 16, at 8 p.m. His subject will be "The United Nations After 15 Years." Dr. Conway, a graduate of Cambridge University, England, has written books on international affairs.

Committee recommended that the city retain its Thetis Lake and Elk-Beaver Lake properties as watersheds instead of dedicating them as parks.

As watersheds the properties were exempt from taxes but dedication would remove the exemption, Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow said. He added he was certain the properties always would be used as parks anyway.

Ald. Edgelow also opposed a suggestion that the city ask the provincial parks branch if it would be interested in taking over control of the Thetis Lake property.

Committee recommended council ask the provincial government to provide off-street parking for all civil servants at the Parliament Buildings because of complaints from nearby residents against all-day street parking.

PEKING (Reuters)—Communist Chinese authorities are able and willing to play stores to vary their adequate diets above those in state but monotonous diet.

The government in 1959 authorized the organization of village market trading for such goods and newspapers recently have carried many stories of such village bazaars where peasants sold or traded under the eyes of local authorities who were guarding against profiteering.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle

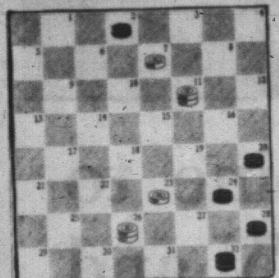

NICE KITTY-TO CHANGE SPOTS

Getting a leopard to change its spots is like... well, you name it. But there's an exception to every rule, of course. This specimen at right, for instance, is not only willing to go along with a gag, but proposes to change his spots before your eyes.

IT'S YOUR MOVE

White may be outmanned above, but he's not to be outdone. It's White's turn, moving up the board. He takes the game in just two moves. That's right, just two moves. What are the winning plays?

PITY POOR BABY-SITTER HERE

Pity the poor baby-sitter called to care for the family pictured above. You'll recognize the family shown in an outline formed by adding missing lines. Begin at dot 1 and draw to dot 2, then to 3, 4, 5, etc., until you have touched at all of the dots. Where two numbers mark one dot, use dot twice.

LETTER MATH

You can add letters just like figures. The problem below is an example of letter arithmetic in which each letter represents a figure in a simple problem in addition. You can reconstruct the original problem by finding the numbers that each letter stands for. To help you in getting started, we will say that the letter D replaces 8, S is 4, E is 0. Now take it from there.

SLED DOGS
Time limit: three minutes.
(Solve this puzzle in 100 seconds or less to win a prize.)

MAKE PLANE CONNECTIONS?

Bill, John, Henry and Joe have to catch the six o'clock jet for Centreville if they are to reach there in time for the game.

1. Bill's watch is 10 minutes fast but he thinks it's five minutes slow.
2. John's watch is 10 minutes slow but he thinks that it's 10 minutes fast.
3. Joe's watch is five minutes slow but he thinks it is 10 minutes fast.
4. Henry's watch is five minutes fast but he thinks it's 10 minutes slow.

Each of them leaves to catch the plane so that he will just make it if his time is what he thinks it is. Which boy (or boys) misses the plane?

PRIZE ENDINGS

Here's something to try at your next party. Copy on sheets of paper the following groups of letter:

ANDO
ANGO

Distribute the sheets of paper and pencils. Announce that all of these are the endings of fairly well known words. See which one can complete the words first, and award a prize. Before looking at the answers, perhaps you'd like to try the list yourself.

You may wish to make up a new list of words endings for another round of the game.

JUNIOR'S MAGICAL BLOCKS

Nine of Junior's Christmas blocks are arranged in such a manner as left that they do not quite measure up to a magic square—that is, the figures do not add up to the same total—15—in all directions: down, across and diagonally. Can you rearrange three of the blocks to make it a true magic square—that is, one that will add to 15 in the three ways indicated?

4-H Projects At Record High

Project enrolment in Canadian 4-H Clubs reached a new high of 78,206 in 1960, an increase of 2,352 over 1959, it was announced in Ottawa by the Canadian Council of 4-H Clubs.

Actual number of boys and girls taking part in 4-H work, however, declined 1,279 from the 1959 figures for a total of 65,407 in 1960.

Number of 4-H clubs in the country increased during the year from 5,271 to 6,251. Average age of members was 13.5 years, and average number of members per club was 12.5.

DUNCAN—An innovation to be tested this year by the board of trustees of Cowichan School District 65 will be the establishment of three-man committees for building, management and salary negotiation.

Suggestion that the make-up of the busiest committees be increased from the normal two to three members was made by Trustee Harold Whitfield. In case of illness there would still be two members to carry on the committee work, he said. "And at the same time, the load could be shared a little more equally."

Chairman Mrs. I. Tarlton agreed and appointed the following committees for 1961:

Building, Wilf Peck, Whitfield, Stan Holgate; management, Grant Loveseth, Whitfield, Peck; transportation, Pat Mason, Mrs. J. Bailey; finance, J. S. C. Fraser, Gordon

Day; salaries, Loveseth, Mason, Peck; safety, Mason, Holgate.

Representative to the board of health, Gordon Day; representative to the V.I. regional library, Mrs. Bailey. Board chairman and the chairmen of the building, management, and finance committees will comprise a committee to deal with referendums and building sites.

North Cowichan — Reeve Donald Morton has announced council committees for 1961. In each case, first named is chairman:

General purposes: Reeve and whole council; finance, Reeve Morton, Coun. W. T. Bowles; public works, Coun. Tony Staples, Coun. Gerald Smith; fire protection, Bowles, Coun. Reg. Clegg; parks, beaches and recreation: G. Smith, Clegg.

Sports council: Staples, Smith; police, traffic, signs, Clegg; hospital building committee, Staples, Morton; civil defence, Smith, Morton.

Council representatives: Central V.I. Library Board, Clegg; School District 67 education committee, Bowles; King's Daughters' Hospital Board, Smith; Union Board of Health, Bowles; SPCA, Clegg.

DUNCAN—In an attempt to keep up with the growing school population, 14 new classrooms were built in Cowichan School District 65 last year, Trustee Wilf Peck told the school board this week. Also added were two gymnasium-activity rooms and 26 acres of land.

The school district's holdings now include a total of 110 classrooms, 36 other rooms, six gymnasium-activity rooms, 36 individual buildings, and 111 acres of land.

FIREFIGHTERS TACKLE LAND OR WATER TASKS

(From Duncan Bureau)

CHEMAINUS — The well-trained volunteer fire department here is equipped to handle any emergency — on land as well as under the water.

In addition to operating two fire trucks, a trailer pump unit, salvage and rescue truck, and an ambulance, the department is believed to be the only volunteer brigade in B.C. with a trained team of frogmen standing by at all times in case of marine emergencies.

STARTED IN 1958

The four-man frogman team became a regular part of the brigade in 1958, after firemen found themselves being called to an increasing number of dockside and beach accidents at this seaside community.

Four firemen with an interest in skin diving volunteered for the extra duties. Richard Cooper, Gordie Ledingham, Lawson Mead and Harry Chase were each given 100 hours of underwater training by professional diver, Tom Lahde of Ladysmith.

Empire Stevedoring Co., MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd., Kinsmen and Rotary Clubs assisted the department in outfitting the team at a cost of $200 per man.

Each has a wet suit, weight belt, knife, fins, goggles, compass, depth gauge and air tanks.

Go-Kart Driver Dies

PARIS (Reuters) — Police Friday investigated the death of an 18-year-old girl who is believed to be the first fatal casualty in France in go-karting, the midjet motor sport. Liliane Laval died when her go-kart whirled out of control, crashed through a plate-glass window and fell about 37 feet into a street during a race.

Harry Chase has since left the department but his place has been taken by Steve Evans who has been diving with the team for the past six months.

In marine emergency and rescue work, the frogman team works in conjunction with Chemainus Towing Co., which provides transportation to and from accident scenes. Two young members of the fire department, Tom Millard and Alan Tart, act as tenders and help prepare and equip the men for diving.

To date, the diving firemen have participated in four minor searches, each ending successfully. Weekly practice dives and endless checking and rechecking of equipment keeps them prepared at all times for emergency calls.

In addition to their frogman duties, the four men are also on call 24 hours a day in case of fires.

STEER BY STARS

Socked-In Sockeye Go Astray

OTTAWA (CP) — Evidence that sockeye salmon use the stars to navigate while migrating was reported here Friday to the Fisheries Research Board of Canada.

A report by the board's biological station at Nanaimo said observations on adult salmon show that migration is limited to particular pathways at particular times. There was evidence that migratory movement was influenced by celestial changes.

Studies indicated consistent directional tendencies when vision of the sky was permitted. Overcast skies or artificial lighting covering resulted in the fish heading in random directions.

BCE to Spend $3.7 Million On Island Jobs

B.C. Electric capital expenditures for 1961 will total $53,000,000, with $3,750,000 of this sum earmarked for south Vancouver Island projects.

Installation of the Topaz Avenue substation will cost $770,000. Eventually it will become the key centre of electrical distribution in Victoria, taking over from the Bay Street substation.

W. C. Mearns, vice-president in Victoria, said one of the largest single items will be the completion of a third 132,000-volt circuit down Island from Stratford, north of Duncan, terminal of the under-gulf cables. It will cost $728,000.

WIRES GO SOON

Underground wiring in downtown Victoria will cost $60,000, and will move the project to the point where removal of overhead wires will be imminent.

Extensions to new homes will cost $450,000, and $360,000 has been allotted for conversion of additional Greater Victoria transmission lines from 4,000 to 12,000 volts.

On the mainland about 75 per cent of the total will be spent on new generating and transmission facilities, with the largest single item being the $13,300,000 to be spent this year on the Burrard thermal generating station under construction near Port Moody. First of six 211,000 horsepower generating units will be placed in service early in 1962.

GAS EXPANSION

Another $2,300,000 will be spent to complete the transmission line project between the Bridge River power project and Cheekye substation north of Squamish.

The company will spend $5,800,000 to extend its gas

Rural Saanich Municipality Officials Sworn

Central Saanich Reeve R. Gordon Lee, his council, and a member of the municipal police commission were sworn into office this week by Magistrate D. G. Ashby at a ceremony in the municipal hall, Saanichton.

Sworn to two-year terms on council were Albert Vickers, Thomas Miehell, and A. K. Hemstreet. Coun. Frank Grimshaw was sworn to a one-year term, and H. E. Baade took office as police commissioner. Inaugural meeting was opened by retiring Reeve H. Rupert Brown, who turned the gavel over to Reeve Lee. First regular meeting of the council will be Tuesday at 8 p.m.

All Parties Desperate for Esquimalt-Saanich Federal Seat

Local politicians are preparing for one of the hottest federal by-election fights in B.C. history when the poll for the Esquimalt-Saanich seat is called.

The announcement by Prime Minister Diefenbaker last week that there would not be a general election this year has cleared the decks and observers believe the by-election will be called for late March or early April.

The Progressive Conservatives of the riding have arranged a meeting for Tuesday at which they will set a date for a nomination meeting.

Meantime, they have set a campaign in motion to draft Reeve George Chatterton of Saanich as their candidate. However, he will have at least two opponents for the nomination in Cecil W. Holms, former federal organizer for the party, and John C. B. Keane, an Oak Bay engineer.

But when the battle lines are finally set and the candidates chosen, the organizers here are predicting that most of the big guns on the Canadian political scene will take part in the campaign.

Each of the four major parties is desperately anxious to win the seat.

Here, briefly, is the way the underlying thinking of the parties is analyzed:

● Progressive Conservatives: The seat as it now exists was formed in a redistribution in 1952 and has been held ever since by General George

Peakes, whose appointment as lieutenant-governor caused the vacancy. He also held the Nanaimo portion of the riding for seven years before that time, so the Conservatives have a 15-year record in the seat.

In addition, since the seat was held by a cabinet minister, the government will go all out to maintain the prestige which will go with holding it in the Conservative column. Particularly in this so because of the setbacks the government suffered in the fall by-elections in the east.

● The Liberal party is keenly anxious to get a toe-hold back in the west. After the 1958 debacle the party does not hold a single seat in the Commons west of the Great Lakes.

Next week in Ottawa the Liberals will hold their "grass roots" rally to rebuild the party fortunes and it is quite likely Esquimalt-Saanich will provide first testing ground for public acceptance of their plans. They are pinning their hopes on retired naval captain David Groos.

● The New Party (combining CCF and the trades unions) will be facing its first test west of Ontario under the changed label.

The new political movement has taken heart through the victory of Walter Pitman in the Peterborough by-election in the fall and will wage an all-out campaign to put Glen Hamilton, a social worker turned politician, into office.

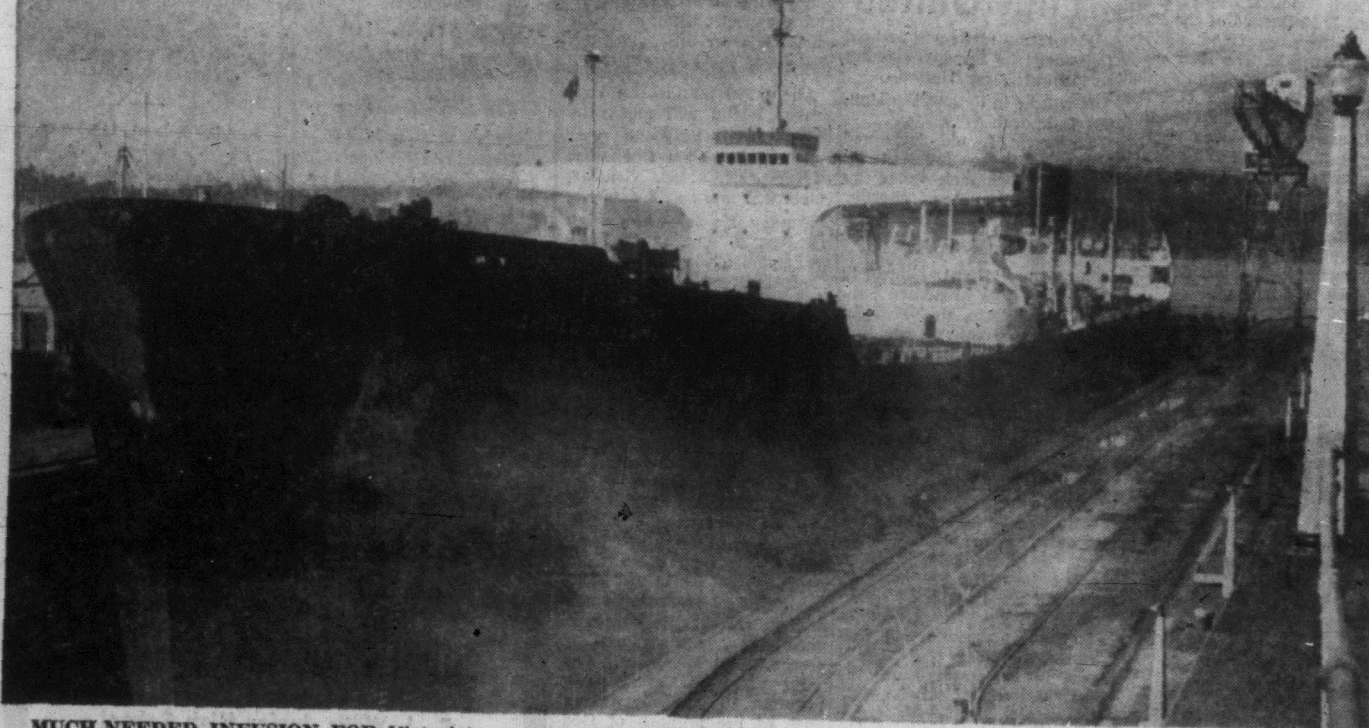

The CCF party has held sections of the riding in the provincial field over the last 20 years and hopes this can be turned to account in its federal movement.

● Social Credit hopes to use the seat as a springboard to a revival of its national aspirations. Social Credit was completely wiped out of Parliament in the 1958 election, but since then Premier Bennett and its other leaders have indicated they do not intend to remain purely a provincial political phenomena and will use the first available opportunity to get back into the national picture. They have yet to choose a candidate but promise a "strong one."

As an added zest to the by-election there are two minor party candidates already announced—Norman Baker of New Westminster as a United Empire Loyalist and Don Florio of the Socialist Party of Canada.

All in all it adds up to a hard-fought political scrap.

MUCH-NEEDED INFUSION FOR Victoria's anaemic shipyard payrolls started with the arrival here of the giant, world-girdling tanker Harold H. Helm, for survey, painting, and any necessary repairs. Yarrows Ltd. will employ 200 men for at least five days, for a payroll in excess of $25,000—a lot of money for the workmen, but "peanuts" to the big ship, which earns more than $10,000 a day when working, and a thundering "zero" when in port for repairs. Thus it's a round-the-clock operation, and overtime is of no consequence. Yarrows officials, who in recent years have put on a big drive to bring the supertankers into Government Graving Dock, hope the Helm is the first of at least 10 tankers to come here this year. Longer Scenic Drive Planned

Saanich this year may go ahead with a plan to extend Marine Drive from Cadboro Bay to the boundary of Central Saanich.

Reeve George Chatterton said today he will propose to council a survey be conducted to determine the route for the extension of the scenic thoroughfare.

Marine drive which starts from the city now ends at Cadboro Bay.

AROUND PENINSULA

It had been proposed by the Capital Region Planning Board that the drive be constructed around the Saanich Peninsula, but the project so far has made no headway beyond Cadboro Bay.

"Once the survey is completed we can tackle the problem of funds for its development," the reeve said. "It may be a good project for the Capital Improvement District Commission to undertake."

The big hitch to extending the drive beyond Saanich, the reeve said, is the matter of costs to survey the route through Central Saanich and beyond that.

COST-SHARING

The provincial government, he said, has been asked to share the costs to survey the route through Central Saanich.

He said Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi has agreed to look into the matter.

"I believe we should do all we can to complete the Marine Drive project as soon as possible," the reeve said. "It would be a wonderful asset to the Greater Victoria area and Saanich Peninsula."

Will They Gag Gagliardi Case?

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Legislative Reporter

Some members of the B.C. Legislature are wondering when Highways Minister Phil Gagliardi will appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada against his $1,000 contempt fine for paying a contract contrary to a court order.

Officially it's still "under consideration."

But there are MLAs who are eager to bring the whole thing up in the House.

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan, for one, has called for a legislative inquiry into highway contracts.

If the appeal goes through just about the time the House opens Jan. 26, then the whole subject would presumably be sub judice—taboo.

Another issue the government might muffle is hydro power. Some more MLAs are wondering if this might happen because of the B.C. Energy Board's investigation into Peace and Columbia projects.

Surprise! The government has actually reduced a tax. It's the schedule of fees for motor carriers—buses, trucks, taxis and freight haulers.

Average reduction is 10 per cent, but big buses carrying more than 21 persons will get a licence for $48 instead of $72 after March 1. Big trucks carrying more than 18,000 pounds which were $48 will also be $42.

The reason: the motor carrier branch's revenue was so good there was a small surplus.

Education Minister Leslie Peterson has passed out sections of the Chant Commission report to his staff with orders to investigate and recommend if its recommendations should be put into effect.

The fan mail, meanwhile, is pouring in.

"I'm getting lots of letters," says Mr. Peterson. "They comment both ways."

Actually, he's pretty pleased with the report.

Orders, particularly from school districts, are coming into the Queen's Printer's, where 5,000 copies are being prepared for sale about Jan. 15 at $3 plus 15 cents tax. Nothing's cut, but the original 845 pages have been trimmed to 470 by using smaller type size.

Appointed to the B.C. Research Council is deputy lands minister E. W. Bassett, B.C.'s top technical negotiator in Columbia River matters. He's got the extra job until June 30, 1963.

Also on the board now, as permanent ex officio member, is deputy trade minister T. L. Sturgess.

Also appointed: James R. Edgett of North Vancouver to the Labor Relations Board and Board of Industrial Relations. He's an employer representative and formerly was a labor relations consultant before taking a post with the Canadian Manufacturers' Association last September.

If you don't like your coffin you can get your money back, says the B.C. Public Utilities Commission. A new order says firms which supply burial necessities must refund money to clients who change their minds.

Refund for Gulf Islands Ferry operators is being made by the government to the tune of $2,522.40 for wharfage charges assessed on extra trips among the islands.

Something special for Vancouver Island's Strathcona Park would be welcomed this year—50th anniversary of the province's public parks.

March 1, 1911, Strathcona became the B.C. government's first park. Now there are 165, totalling 8,423,736 acres.

MONTE ROBERTS

OUR VERY OWN GARDENING GUIDE

(So you thought it was too early, eh? edition.)

One of the first things the non-gardener must learn, in this, the fairest city of them all, is that it is never too early to start avoiding gardening.

In most other Canadian locales the ardent non-gardener can relax at this time of the year, look out his picture window at a picture of perfect peace—the soil lying dormant under a blanket of snow, the flowering shrubs sensibly shielding their bare limbs and snuggling together for protection from the cold.

In those more-favored climes, the non-gardener need not worry about not doing any gardening until April, or perhaps May, or even—blessed thought—June.

But here in this, the Fairest City of Them All, the Non-Gardener is put to the test even before the middle of January has muddled.

Right now, as the rains come down, thus enriching the all-too-fertile soil and causing small encroachments of new tendrils to creep up toward the sky, the Non-Gardener has to start thinking of reasons why he is not tending his garden.

It is not enough to say the soil is too wet to work.

It is not enough to go out into the garden and say to the new tendrils: "Go back, you fools, it ain't time yet."

It is not enough to say to all who will listen: "I'd love to get out there and dig, but I always have lumbago, a sore back, and multifold congestions of the chest at this time of year."

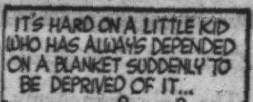

It doesn't even work to say you are going to Honolulu on a winter vacation, because the non-gardener would have to bed down the plants, arrange for their care and feeding, and report his absence to the horticultural society before leaving.

The only solution Our Very Own Gardening Guide can offer is this:

Four kerosene over the whole garden and set a match to it.

Mind you, the rain will put the fire out, but at least the eager-beaver tendrils will be discouraged for a short time.

(For more advice, wait until the tendrils become undiscouraged.)

LUMBERMEN PLANNING OFFICE IN AUSTRALIA

The British Columbia Lumber Manufacturers' Association announced today it is opening an office in Australia and increasing the staff of its London office.

It said the appointments are further steps in the association's campaign to increase acceptance of B.C. lumber products in the United Kingdom and Australia.

Barrie Ford, a professional forester with extensive experience in lumber sales, production, grading and management, will open the association's first Australian office since before the Second World War.

R. C. Bennett, an architect, and W. E. Townsley, who has a broad background in retailing, forestry and mill management, will join the association's staff in London.

Oak Bay housekeeper Mrs. Minnie Carroll, 60, of 2524 Esplanade, lost her purse containing $145 and broke a finger when she struggled with an assailant at the rear of her home Friday at 8:45 p.m.

Police said the woman—just paid her salary—was in a narrow walkway connecting the home of W. W. Webster, 2524 Esplanade, with Beach Drive near Estevan.

It is believed the man had been prowling the area and attacked Mrs. Carroll on the spur of the moment, perhaps when she surprised him.

She was treated for her fracture and bruises at Royal Jubilee Hospital and discharged.

Mrs. Carroll said the man, who she described as well-dressed, came up in the dark "from nowhere" and asked if there was a way through her property. She said no, and he grabbed the purse.

"All I could do was hang on and scream. Then I lost my balance and fell."

The woman was dragged about 10 feet until her purse handle broke and the man ran away with the purse. Besides the money, it contained eyeglasses and papers.

A neighbor told police he heard the woman's screams and when he went to look he saw a man get in a car and drive away from Beach at Estevan.

A film showing the progress made by Russia in the field of power will be shown members of Victoria Electric Club at their next meeting in the Net Loft, noon Tuesday.

It was made by a sub-committee of the U.S. Senate in the spring of 1960 and covers the power installations in the USSR.

Pedestrian Hit By Car Suffers Fracture, Cuts

Pedestrian John Houston, 54, of 1211 McKenzie, is in good condition with a broken arm and cut forehead received when he was in collision with a car driven by Gordon E. McIntyre, 617 Harbinger, at Cook and McKenzie Friday evening.

Police said Houston was crossing Cook in a crosswalk at 5:15 p.m. when the accident happened.

He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Henry Deacon, 850 Seymour, was checked at St. Joseph's for minor injuries, then transferred to HMCS Naden Hospital after his car was in collision with a truck at Saanich and Douglas at 8:12 a.m. today.

Saanich police said the truck, owned by Heaney's, was driven by Ronald Charles Barry, 47 Howe.

Total damage was estimated at $750.

FAMILY REUNION FOR EARLY-DAY MECHANIC

'Pop' Shanks Grew Old With Motor Cars

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Richard (Pop) Shanks—one of the world's first motor mechanics—is 85 today.

He opened a bicycle store in 1903 and the following year hung out a sign, "Motor Cars Repaired." And he's been busy with motors ever since.

At his home at 1041 Holmes Street today, Mr. Shanks looked back through a maze of memories to the earliest days of the automobile.

"It had a stormy childhood," he says, and most people either liked it or hated it.

He recalls how an elderly cyclist came into his store and said: "Do you think they will ever make a success of these blasted machines?"

Mr. Shanks said he thought they would, to which the veteran replied: "Well, I can tell you this—there'll be wholesale slaughter on our highways when they do."

Those were the days when owners of large estates hung out signs at the gates: "No automobiles allowed inside."

Motorists wore goggles and leggings and their lady passengers covered their heads with dust covers.

Mr. Shanks operated a motorcycle store at 937 Fort Street, which is now carried on by his son, Reginald.

He was practically born into the bicycle trade. His parents opened a bike store at Chertsey, Surrey, England, in 1884, and the same year his brother started a bicycle factory.

After serving his apprenticeship in the family store, Mr. Shanks went to Weybridge in 1903, and opened the store which was to become one of England's very first garages.

It still bears his name although he sold out and emigrated to Canada in 1911. He went to Vancouver because he heard it was a virgin field for mechanics and managed a garage there for about a year.

Moving to Victoria in 1912, he worked in a garage for a while and then jumped at the chance of starting his own motorcycle shop.

He was a co-founder and charter member of Victoria Motorcycle Club in 1912 and later was one of three trail-breakers who rode the first motor bikes over the rugged Cariboo Trail.

Until his retirement, Mr. Shanks rode to work daily on a heavy police motorcycle. He still rides down to the store.

Because police motorcycles are hard to "kick off," Mr. Shanks developed his own self-starter for the bike and this enables him to fire the engine by pressing a button.

This evening there will be a family reunion in which Mr. and Mrs. Shanks will be joined by their sons, Reg and Robert, and their daughter, Margot, who is Mrs. Frank Boughton.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

Friday the Thirteenth comes early but not very often in 1961.

The first finger-crossing Friday, when ladders and black cats send strong men rushing for shelter, comes next week.

The second, and only other, day when the superstitions should have stayed in bed is in October.

A burglar thoroughly ransacked a Willows district home Friday night, apparently without stealing anything.

W. E. Enoch, 2072 Newton, told Oak Bay police he was out from 8:11.45 p.m., neglecting to lock the front door.

Someone entered, looked through all drawers, cupboards and purses, evidently in a search for money.

F. G. Bass will speak concerning "Art in High Schools and Art Careers" at the meeting of Mount View High PTA, Monday, 8 p.m., at the school.

Victoria's well-known vocal group, the Meistersingers, will be heard on CBU radio from Vancouver tonight at 9:30.

The choir, under the conductorship of Ted Boulden, will open the CBC's regular seasonal program, Parade of Choirs.

Four films from a series "Eight Steps to Peace," with a commentary by actor Raymond Massey, will be shown in the Newstead Hall, Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The showing has been organized by the World Federalists of Canada, Victoria branch. David P. Reimer will preside and conduct a discussion period after the films.

The public is invited.

Don Poirier, Socialist Party candidate in the Esquimalt-Saanich byelection, will open his campaign at Speakers' Corner, Beacon Hill Park, this Sunday at 2 p.m.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Could you please tell me what Trans-Canada Air Lines is going to do with the DC-3s recently retired from the Victoria-Vancouver run? N.S.

A. One has already been sold to an unidentified Eastern Canadian business organization; the other three have or will be ferried to Lethbridge for storage pending sale soon. Sale is expected to other carriers, in Canada.

Douglas Johnson, RCN, was fined a total of $45 in city police court today.

He paid a $20 fine for being a minor in possession of liquor and a $25 fine for driving without adequate insurance.

Both offences took place Dec. 17.

Johnson had a case of beer in his car.

Esquimalt municipal employees are asking a 5 per cent wage increase this year.

Reeve A. C. Wurtel said today outside workers have asked for an increase of 10 cents an hour across the board while members of the inside staff have asked for a similar amount.

The 12-member, joint police-fire department is also seeking an increase, the reeve said. Police have offered to let the police commission set a figure to start negotiations bearing in mind Victoria city policemen were given an 11 per cent increase in 1960.

Doncaster School PTA will meet in the school auditorium next Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Colin Graham, curator at Victoria Art Gallery, will speak on "When Your Child Paints," with slide illustrations.

"We don't miss the snow one bit!" comments Mrs. J. U. Graham on this her first stay in Victoria. Family has recently moved from Dartmouth, N.S., where Lieut. Graham, RCN, was taking the new weapons course in HMCS Stadacona. He is now weapons officer in HMCS Fraser. Young Paula, who will celebrate her second birthday in late March, and David, six, both love being able to play outside without having to don snow boots and other heavy gear. The Graham's new home is at 596 Judah Street.

Welcome Mat Rolled Out for Our New Neighbors

Rev. and Mrs. S. F. Sears and their two sons, Michael, nine (left), and John, 14, are thoroughly enjoying their first home in Victoria where Rev. Sears is now the assistant minister in First United Church. The family recently moved here from Sutton, Ont., and now make their home at 1448 Fairfield Road. Michael attends Sir James Douglas School while John is a pupil at Central Junior High School.

As 1961 takes its first steps towards maturity, families all over our city arrange drapes, unpack their favorite china and begin making new homes. To them, the promise of the New Year holds more than its accustomed assurance of adventure. It means a new beginning in a new city. Some have come from eastern provinces; some from the rolling prairies. Others have left points in British Columbia to make a new life in Victoria. Whether it's an appointment in a chosen profession or fulfillment of a dream to retire where life and the elements are kind the year round, all soon succumb to the spell of life on the Pacific Coast. Already the warmth of friendships made during the holiday season has brought that inner glow which comes only with the feeling of belonging. We, too, add our own friendly wish to these, our new neighbors. "May this be the happiest New Year of all!"

Main reasons for Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Davies' move from their home in Medicine Hat, Alta., were "better climate, beautiful scenery and a much nicer place to bring up children." The Davies have five youngsters. They are, left to right, Gwyneth, five; Megan, two; three-month-old Kevin; Doreen, three, and seven-year-old Ian. Family is now living at 2578 MacDonald Drive. Mr. Davies is practising law here.

True British Columbians, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Loader recently moved to Victoria when Mr. Loader was appointed manager of CKDA radio station, after spending the last 11 years in Trail. Prior to that they lived for six years in Vancouver. Says Mrs. Loader enthusiastically, "We love the people, the weather—everything!" Their new home is at 2644 Cadboro Bay Road.

Miss McKay Honored in Vancouver

Several of her former colleagues crossed to the mainland on Friday to attend a reception given in honor of Miss Ruby McKay, former provincial superintendent of child welfare. Reception, which was arranged by a group of her friends, was held in the social suite of the Faculty Club of the University of British Columbia. Among the 150 guests were representatives from the social service, legal and medical professions. Telegrams were read from admirers in all parts of the United States and Canada, acknowledging Miss McKay as a leading authority in her field. Mr. William Dixon, director of the school of social work at UBC, and Mr. Justice W. Manson both paid personal tribute to Miss McKay. Presiding at the head table were Mrs. Manson, Mrs. H. W. McInnes, Mrs. H. E. Blanchard, Dr. Jean McLennan, Miss Barbara Finlayson, Miss Mary McPhedran, Miss Margery Hardy and Miss Avis Humphrey.

Back in Canada From Viet Nam

After spending approximately a year in Viet Nam, Lt. Cmdr. B. N. Weber and Mrs. Weber with their six-year-old daughter Brenda, arrived back in Victoria earlier this week. They are the house guests of Lieut. Frank Allwood and Mrs. Allwood, 1174 Hewlett Place.

Post in Halifax awaits Lt. Cmdr. Weber after a holiday in Victoria. While they are here many friends are entertaining for the Webers, including their hosts who have arranged a party for this evening.

On Thursday, Lt. Cmdr. Ian Butters and Mrs. Butters entertained at a luncheon party in their home on Masters Avenue.

The same evening, Lt. Cmdr. and Mrs. R. K. Stewart, Highrock Place, entertained. Guests were Lt. Cmdr. Allwood and Mrs. Allwood, Lt. Cmdr. Jim Bowen, Lt. Cmdr. Butters and Mrs. Butters, Lieut. Herbert Clark and Mrs. Clark, Lt. Cmdr. Norman Long, Lieut. Ron Walker and Mrs. Walker, Lt. Cmdr. (Rtd.) Robert Hollins and Mrs. Hollins, Lt. Cmdr. R. L. Savage and Mrs. Savage and Commissioned Officer Frank Dennis and Mrs. Dennis.

From California

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Milburn, 2382 Heron Street, returned last Thursday from a month's holiday in Woodside, Calif. They spent the time visiting their son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Milburn, and their four grandchildren who live in Woodside.

New Arrivals

Recently arrived from Vancouver are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Gowan with daughters, Leslie and Elizabeth, to make their home in Victoria. Leslie returns to Vancouver this weekend to complete her final year at York House School. The Gowan home is at 629 Beach Drive.

At Midday

Mrs. Norma MacDonald, Miss Frances Jordan and Mr. and Mrs. M. Seelinger are entertaining friends at a midday party in their Deal Street home on Monday.

Mother Beats Stagnation In Back-to-School Move

TORONTO (CP)—Mrs. Arnot Parrett, a mother of four young children, has gone back to school as a "hedge against stagnation."

She's a first-year student at Victoria College, University of Toronto.

"University is such a heterogeneous group," she said. "I never enjoyed studying so much before."

Mrs. Parrett says the move has increased her children's sense of responsibility. They have learned to tidy their rooms every morning and they are more interested in their own studies.

"Why this morning Rod slipped down at 7 to study social studies with me."

Rod, 11, sees that his brother, Carson, 7, and sister, Rosemary, 6, and Jill, 9, get to places at appointed times.

A housekeeper lives in with the family in their 11-room house. Mrs. Parrett does the weekly shopping and goes over the day's menu each evening with the housekeeper.

Her husband, whom she describes as "broadminded, intelligent and indulgent," is a real estate investment analyst.

SHE'S 70.

Paintings Have Fervor Of Youth

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mrs. Kate Collins decided to go looking for a hobby when her granddaughter started school and she was no longer needed as a baby-sitter.

She was past 60 at the time but figured that wasn't too old to take up painting. She attended art school daily and studied for six years.

Now, close to 70, she has reason to believe it was worth while. She has had her paintings exhibited for the first time.

Her work doesn't give any clue to her age. One called Meditation shows a dusky-skinned full-bodied woman; another, Morning, is of a starkly white nude.

PREPARES FOR VISIT TO FAR EAST

LONDON (Reuters)—Queen Elizabeth interrupted her Christmas and New Year's vacation at Sandringham to return to Buckingham Palace Wednesday to make preparations for her forthcoming visits to India, Pakistan, Nepal and Iran.

She travelled to London by train and returned to Sandringham also by rail, Thursday.

The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh are due to fly from London Jan. 29 on their tour, which will last until early March.

Capable First Lady Undaunted By Challenges of New Position

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—London's municipal election Dec. 12 gave this city a first lady who hates high heels, hats and housework.

Mrs. Gordon Stronach, wife of the new mayor, is happiest when she is coaching her pee-wee hockey team or building a bedside table.

Her new position holds no terrors, however, for the woman who eloped with a Mountie she met on a skating rink when she was a schoolgirl in Humboldt, Sask.

"I like the idea very much," she said. "I'll enjoy it. There's only one thing wrong. I'm against hats. I hate hats."

Mrs. Stronach owns one hat. "But if I have to wear one I will," she added. This willingness to adapt has helped Mrs. Stronach through her married life which started in an isolated RCMP outpost in Saskatchewan. Her first home had only oil lamps for lighting. Water came from a pump and she cooked on a coal stove.

Until her husband retired and became chief of London Township police six years ago, Mrs. Stronach had to adapt to new surroundings constantly. The longest period she, and her husband stayed in one place was three years in Yorkton, Sask.

The new first lady doesn't intend to let official duties interfere with her hockey or carpentry. She does most of her woodworking in the kitchen of her suburban home—between cooking for her husband and 12-year-old son, Sandy.

She and Sandy plan to start work soon on their biggest project to date—a boat.

Mrs. Stronach, a tall, slim brunette who says she has not visited a hairdresser for six years, took over coaching of the University Heights Pee-wee team from her husband when he turned his attention to his election campaign. Hockey wasn't new to her. As a schoolgirl in Humboldt she played on a girls' team which invariably won its annual match against the members of town council.

She is equally skilful at curling—playing seven days a week with the London Ladies' Curling Club—tennis, badminton and swimming. She once did a two-year stint as a life-guard at a swimming pool.

Mrs. Stronach, who smiles when she recalls once attending a May Court tea in curling garb, says:

"People are people regardless of how they dress. If someone has a reasonable position it's no reason to get a big head. I'll just be myself."

Specialties—But National Dish Out

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia salmon gets a nod from Hugh Craig, president of the Canadian Restaurant Association, as an outstanding regional specialty despite the fact he insists Canada has no national dish because of the country's size.

Roast prime ribs of beef comes close, however, he said during a visit here from Calgary.

But while there was no national dish, there were several regional specialties such as lobster and other seafoods in the Maritimes, pea soup in Quebec, Winnipeg goldeye in Manitoba, berry pie in Saskatchewan, beef in Alberta and the salmon in B.C.

And there was a trend toward specialization by Canadian restaurants as indicated by the popularity of steak houses, pancake houses and pizza palaces. One oddity was the demand for barbecued pig tails from Western Canada in Kitchener, Ont.

Counterfeit Art Surveyed In Fascinating Study

FORGERIES, DEALERS, EXPERTS, by Sepp Schuller, translated from the German by James Cleugh. 191 pp. Illustrated. Index. McClelland & Stewart. $6.00.

Reviewed by Colin Graham

Books about the devious art of forging art are apt to amount to little more than a collection of anecdotes strung on a shaky historical framework. While keyed to a popular rather than a specialist level, Sepp Schuller's book is a cut above these. It is in fact the most extensive work in the field this reviewer has met with.

Starting with forgeries dating back into the dim past of Egypt, he touches lightly on the scurrilous activities of Greek and Roman counterfeiters before settling down solidly in the Renaissance, where he deals with the curious and complex problem of spurious Durers.

The bulk of the book is concerned with the widespread faking activities of the last eighty years, and with the sometimes embarrassing efforts of museum directors, dealers, and collectors to separate true from false.

Chapters are devoted to the almost forgotten but nonetheless fascinating cases of the busts of Bastianini, the Sarcophagus of Cerveteri, and the Tiara of Saitaphernes, as well as the more famous and still not wholly settled issue of the Da Vinci bust of Flora, which became the focus of a verbal duel between British and German experts in the opening years of this century.

The section on the faking of French arts and crafts is enough to make the collector's hair stand on end.

Schuller mentions, for example, that the latest estimates of the numbers of works purporting to be by Corot which have reached the United States in the past twenty years put the figure at over 100,000.

Still more serious was the statement made three years ago by the chairman of the Paris art dealers' syndicate that according to data gathered by this syndicate and the French police 90 per cent of all the "antique" furniture sold there in the last 50 years had been forged.

On the other hand the author also makes it clear that it has been the dealer who has often led the way in the detection and exposure of fakes.

Extensive chapters are devoted, fittingly enough, to the celebrated post-war cases of the Vermeers forged by Hans van Meegeren, and the Lubeck frescoes concocted by Lothar Malskat.

Still, the book falls considerably short of the author's claim to "survey, for the first time, in its entirety, the wide field of battle between forgers, dealers and experts and thus to clarify the real nature of art."

No mention is made, for instance, of quasi forgers like the baroque Luca Giordano, or of Boudin and Monticelli, two of the most copiously forged names in French art.

A brief chapter is given to oriental carpets, but otherwise the whole vast field of the faking of near and far eastern art is left untouched, even unmentioned.

One would have liked, for instance, to hear what Herr Schuller would have to say on the faking of the Shang and Chou bronzes of early China; of the almost hopelessly tangled field of the forging of Sung dynasty masters by Ming painters, of Korean ware by the Japanese, or of... well, the field stretches almost to infinity.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

Most of the British Colonial definitive stamp issues of the reign of Queen Elizabeth have only been in use for five or six years, and, judging from past experience, it might be expected that few changes would be made for another similar period.

But it is becoming all too evident that the Colonial Office wants to speed up the flow of shekels from the pockets of the stamp-collecting fraternity, and instead of spacing these long and expensive sets at reasonable intervals, it intends to give us an entire new series for all the colonies, within the next year or so.

Full sets (up to the pound value in most cases) have already appeared for Gibraltar, Kenya, and Trinidad. In preparation are similar sets for Nigeria, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Swaziland, Bechuanaland, Basutoland, Tristan de Cunha, British Honduras, and North Borneo.

Add the two special overprinted sets for British Cameroons and Cyprus, and top it off with the latest emissions of New Zealand, South Africa, and S. W. Africa, and you get a total that would daunt any but the wealthiest philatelists.

COSTLY FLOOD

One expects this sort of thing when a new monarch comes to the throne, but the current flood of new stamps, as listed above, which will cost over $100 is really quite unnecessary except in one or two cases, and all include denominations such as the 10 sh. and 11, for which there is no excuse.

On the rare occasions when the postage on a parcel might cost such an amount, it could very simply be made up with 5 sh. stamps. If Canada, which uses more postage in an hour than some of the small colonies do in a year, can get by with a $1 stamp as the top denomination, it is pretty obvious that the 11 values of most of the colonies (many no larger than Salt Spring Is.) are solely for collector consumption.

As well as these standard sets, quite a few new commemorative issues are either in preparation or already issued. B. Honduras is overprinting the 2, 3, 10, and 15 cents, "NEW CONSTITUTION 1960" to advertise its new step towards self-government. Malaya will mark the installation of its new ruler, H. M. the Yang di-Pertuan Agong, with a portrait stamp.

Ghana's monthly new issue (3d, 6d, and 1s3d) honors UN Human Rights Day, and Mauritius is preparing a special issue of 4 values to commemorate the Sesqui-Centenary of the P.O. under British Administration.

Foundation Honors Artists of Canada

One could not begin to sum up the advances or trends in art made during the preceding year in a few short paragraphs. However there are a few items of outstanding interest to everyone.

In the Art World it is interesting to note that the Solomon R. Guggenheim Foundation of New York published: "A special Honorable Mention for the highest balanced quality throughout five candidate pictures of a sectional group award to Canada."

Artists included in this group were Paul-Emile Borduas, (deceased February 12, 1960), Edmund Alleyne, Leon Bellefleur, Jean Paul Riopelle, and Harold Town. This, of course, is a unique award for Canada, and I believe a "first" for any country.

The Royal Academy in London, England, achieved a "first," at least for the Academy, by accepting two large canvases by Mr. William Gear. This artist is an abstract expressionist and his inclusion in the conservative academy points to a tremendous change that is gradually taking place in the older schools.

During the summer, and again from England came news that Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth had ordered the redecoration of a private suite of rooms at Windsor Castle, in the "modern decor." And in keeping with the decoration a selection of eleven contemporary paintings was made by the Queen and Prince Philip.

Britain's top sculptress Barbara Hepworth, is represented by a delicate and precise painting called "Arthodestis of the Hip."

The vast country side is depicted by Sydney Nolan in "Australian Landscape," and

A WRITER'S DIARY

By ROBERTSON DAVIES

One of the literary successes of the last months of 1960 was S. N. Behrman's book Conversation With Max. It is interesting not only because of the charm and skill with which Mr. Behrman wrote it, but as an important addition to one of the most extraordinary literary legends of the past century—the legend of the fastidious, publicity-shunning Max.

The late Max Beerbohm has a considerable public, and one of which any author might be proud, for it is composed of people who care more about literature than the generality of readers.

But somehow his admirers tend to think of him as a neglected author, whom they and a few kindred spirits have discovered and cherished.

Henry Maximilian Beerbohm (he is called Maxwell in the Behrman book but that was a mistake of the publisher and not of the author) was born in London in 1872. After making a reputation as an essayist, theatre critic and caricaturist, he went in 1910 to Italy and lived in Rapallo, except during the two wars, until his death in 1936.

Success a Matter of Indifference

Surely this is worldly success? But Max did not choose to think of himself as a success; he considered success rather vulgar. He made little money from his productions, and of that fact he was curiously proud. Success, as the world judges it, was a matter of indifference to him.

This was more than the fastidiousness of a sensitive man. It was part of the extraordinary unity of Max's personality. Most literary men, and especially the very successful ones, have divided personalities; they may dislike the clamor and nonsense that goes with public success, but they want the success as evidence of their power.

Max could do without it. He

Artists' Licence to Hit Below Belt

Max might have been accused of coarseness, too. Some of his caricatures go far beyond what good taste permits; he could find the pulpy spot in a subject, and probe it as mercilessly as anybody who has ever used a pencil.

The Royal Family provided him with subjects for his most penetrating work, and some of his comment, especially on the ladies of that group, was not the kind of thing a gentleman does.

But artists are not gentlemen; the sensitivity which distinguishes them is balanced at the other end of the scale by a coarseness which they may, or may not, keep out of their work. They do not "play the game" as gentlemen are supposed to do. Max lived in the most crystalline of glass houses, and it was one of his oddities that he would go on throwing stones.

What was his reward? Most of his victims forgave him. Even the Royal Family forgave him, for he was knighted in 1939, and some of his sharpest work is now in the sharp collection.

Everybody seems to have forgiven Max, at last, though a few of the reviews of Mr. Behrman's book which have appeared in England have shown that to forgive is not necessarily to forget.

The book, so good in its way, has clearly been written for people who have never read a line of Beerbohm, or seen one of his drawings. I have read everything of his, which is no mighty boast, for his total output is contained in 10 volumes of modest size, and the books of caricatures are fairly easy to come by.

Therefore I did not need Mr. Behrman's skilful abridgements of his works, and no one else who is seriously interested in Beerbohm will need them either. For people who already know Beerbohm, the book can be irritating.

What, I wonder, will people think who are led by the Beerman book to read some of Beerbohm himself? They will not find Max so cosy, or so easy, or so winning, as Mr. Behrman, in his affection and discipleship, makes him. Max

A Child In Flight

BITTER HERBS, by Marga Minco (Oxford).

This slim (115 pages) memoir by a Jewish girl in occupied Holland lacks tender personal qualities of the now-famous Anne Frank diary. But it is a touching story in its own way of a little girl who watched her family flee the Nazis.

She became so lonely for her parents that she left the comparative safety of her brother and sister-in-law's home to join her father and mother in Amsterdam.

Her matter-of-fact reporting of the train trip and a later one to avoid Nazi capture communicates the terror of the times with great effectiveness.

More on Africa By Alan Moorehead

Less than a year ago, in a volume entitled No Room in the Ark, Alan Moorehead demonstrated his interest in and concern for the men and beasts of Africa; that Stone Age continent which has been abruptly brought face to face with the 20th century.

No Room in the Ark, a Book-of-the-Month Club selection for February, 1960, was an account of what Moorehead had seen and learned during several leisurely trips from Johannesburg north to Khartoum, now the capital of the independent Republic of the Sudan. He had discovered that the few primitive people still surviving were pitiful shadows of their proud and fierce ancestors and also that, unless something was done, and done quickly, the magnificent animals of Africa—the gorillas, giraffes, baboons, elephants and lions—were threatened with extinction.

In his newest book, The White Nile, Moorehead is again in Africa, this time relating the fascinating story of the search for the sources of the great river that winds its way over a thousand miles northward through Egypt to the Mediterranean Sea. The White Nile was chosen by the Book-of-the-Month Club judges as part of a double selection for January, 1961, together with Shadows on the Grass by Isak Dinesen.

In relatively recent times,

Moorehead points out, the region which feeds the Nile south of Khartoum was unexplored territory, virtually as mysterious as the far side of the moon or the unknown world which Columbus set forth to explore in 1492. But between 1856 and 1900 a number of visionary explorers or adventurers, traveling singly or in small parties, managed to pierce the heart of the Dark Continent and thus solve a geographical riddle which had baffled mankind since the days of Herodotus.

In telling their story, Moorehead tells us with the bloody, violent and exotic history of much of eastern Africa, particularly the Sudan. There Arab slave traders had long been entrenched, and had converted the natives to their faith centuries before the first Christian explorers arrived.

The conflict between East and West, between Moslem and Christian in the Sudan, as well as elsewhere in Africa, still goes on and is an important factor in the great political struggle for power in the world today.

Highly Entertaining 'First' But Not for All Tastes

THE LOSER by Peter Ustinov, Little, Brown, 308 pp. $5.00.

Reviewed By R. G. Lawrence

Mr. Ustinov is already known as a playwright (The Love of Four Colonels, Romanoff and Juliet), as an actor, and as a recording artist. He does not add significantly to his stature in this first novel.

It is in part thought-provoking, and in part very entertaining, but many pages of violence, of melodrama, and of sermonizing will make it an unattractive book for sensitive readers.

The story is the career of Hans Winterschild (clearly a symbolic name), born into the disillusioned Germany of the 1920's, indoctrinated by the Hitler youth organizations, and survivor of the Polish, Russian and Italian campaigns of the Second World War.

"FORMULA"

The theme of the novel, Hans' gradual humanization and self-realization, offers significant possibilities which Ustinov fails to realize satisfactorily because his book comes close to "formula writing," mix generously exciting military skirmishes, a few violent deaths, suspense, frustrated romance, some amusing cynicism, then add a dash of sexual experimentation and sexual elches.

Two of these aspects of the novel make it worth one's time; the adventures in Italy do hold a reader's interest throughout, especially as Hans wanders secretively in the country after V.E. Day.

Also, Ustinov's tongue-in-cheek cynicism is highly entertaining—"... the Army is but an extension of school, a paradise for those unwilling to grow up".

Ustinov's satire wider range; one episode involves the activities of a brazen and ignorant American war correspondent gathering information about the battle (he is portrayed as a writer of some fame and may be identifiable to the cognoscenti); the other concerns the making, on location, of a super-colossal American film of the battle.

The novel represents a good try, with several meritorious aspects, but it is not to everyone's taste.

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

If something is going to happen to education in British Columbia it can't be too soon.

At one time in the dark, dim past of our grandparents, education was a grim affair according to today's experts.

Teachers were a bunch of sadists who had the psychopathic idea that kids came to school in order to learn to use their minds and talents and to have their natural inborn indolence exorcised—by force if necessary.

Seat-warmers got their seats warmed frequently and in general the youngsters learned early and vividly the lessons of all of us must learn sooner or later—some of us too late and by a far harder route—that every living soul must acknowledge and respect some authority, from the Queen with her church and council on down; that nothing worth while can be gained or held without constant exercise of mind and/or muscle; that ignorance, far from being bliss, is not even an excuse.

The soft approach, the tolerance toward inertia and pandering to mediocrity which has characterized B.C. educational policy in recent years, blithely ignores one crucial human factor.

Mr. Average Man's urge to avoid anything in the way of physical or mental effort is obvious. From the time of the invention of the wheel, for instance, the desire to be wheel-borne is paramount from the moment a human being steps from the cradle until he propels himself—often unthinkingly—into his grave.

AUTOMATONS

And if he can sit in front of a machine that will grind out platitudinous, unchallenging entertainment by the hour, allowing him to experience the shallowest of emotions without disturbing his mental rut, that is all he will ask of leisure.

What a ghastly prospect! That we should become a nation of unthinking automatons, capable only of pushing buttons and flicking levers, distinguishable from robots only because our metal is warm and weak.

What I am trying to say and taking a long time to get to it, is that most people, even many clever ones, will avoid using their brains if they can get away with it, just as they avoid using their muscles.

So if the Chant Report is used to tackle and mend the under-stressed scholasticism of our educational system, then it will be something for which future generations of Canadians can be thankful.

But what if, in the new-broom terror of sweeping our public schools clean of the clutter and woolly thinking, the rats should get dumped in the ashcan along with personality courses and apple sauce?

CURTAINMENT

Recommendations of the Chant report indicate that the arts will not suffer such a fate, only curtailment of time consumed at the elementary level.

But these things do sometimes get out of hand and speaking personally, while all for more scholasticism, examinations and so forth, I view with alarm any tendency toward reduction in time exposed to the civilizing and enriching influence of the arts.

I wonder if many people realize what lovely music is contained in the 17th century English opera by Henry Purcell, "DIDO AND AENEAS."

This 3000-act masterpiece of operatic writing has had few public performances in Canada. What may be the first in British Columbia will take place in three performances, Jan. 28 (students), 30 and 31, at Oak Bay Junior High School.

Victoria Musical Art Society has taken a big step in staging this gem. It is not an easy or economical venture but is proving distinctly worthwhile for all who are involved in the production.

The whole project got its start in the late summer when plans for an evening of Baroque music were under discussion.

A CHALLENGE

Malcolm Hamilton, Victoria pianist, organist and harpsichordist, now studying under United States Government Fellowship at the University of Washington, suggested the opera.

To those who knew the beauty of music and idea contained in it, the suggestion was a delightful challenge.

For the performances, Mr. Hamilton will come to Victoria and a seven-foot concert harpsichord will come from Vancouver to join in the evening's magic.

The opera's story is based on a romantic Greek legend concerning the Trojan hero, Aeneas, and Dido, Queen of

SCOTTISH CONDUCTOR

First New Year Concert Provides Double Billing

For its first concert of 1961, Victoria Symphony Orchestra will provide two special events on the same program.

First of the three performances will be at Sidney next Friday evening. The usual two at the Royal Theatre Sunday afternoon and Monday evening, will follow.

Guest conductor for these events will be the brilliant young Scot, Alexander Gibson, musical director of the distinguished Scottish National Orchestra.

Thirty-five-year-old Gibson's career has been truly meteoric and his achievements to date suggest that he is a future Beecham or Barbirolli.

ON TV

Musical director of Sadler's Wells Opera since 1957 he has also conducted the London Philharmonic, Halle Orchestra on television, Bournemouth Symphony, BBC Concert Orchestra and the Malmö Orchestra of Sweden.

Under him, the Scottish National Orchestra performs about 180 times a year and in 1960 travelled 12,000 miles.

He has an imposing repertoire from which he has selected for his Victoria concerts, works by British composers Malcolm Arnold, Benjamin Britten and Elgar in addition to the Beethoven Fourth Concerto in which Sheila Bates will be soloist.

1958 TREAT

Those who recall Miss Bates highly promising student career in Victoria, and especially those who heard her excellent performance when she played with the orchestra, in 1958, know that this deeply thoughtful, sensitive musician and proficient pianist will provide an immensely satisfying interpretation of the Beethoven Concerto.

Miss Bates has just left the Royal Academy of Music, London, where she studied with the well known teacher, Harold Craxton.

Her diploma recital on graduation won her the highest possible praise. She spent last summer in Italy and since returning to London has given recitals there and throughout England, recently performing on BBC television.

Conquest of Poland By Woman Pianist

Despite her unfamiliar name, pianist Olegna Fuschchi is a true American, New York-born and California-reared.

The lovely young woman who took Polish audiences by storm and attracted the enthusiastic attention of Artur Schnabel on her first trip abroad in 1959, comes to Victoria as the first Famous Artists attraction of 1961, Wednesday, Jan. 25.

Miss Fuschchi was a student of one of Juilliard School's most famous teachers, Rosina Lhevinne.

At the end of her student-ship there, Miss Fuschchi won both the Josef Lhevinne Memorial Award and the Concert Artists Guild Town Hall Award which enabled her to make her successful debut at New York's Town Hall.

In Paris a few months later, she won a major award in a distinguished competition, Rubinstein was the head of the jury's panel and for the duration of her Paris visit she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Rubinstein and practised to her heart's content on one of her host's fabulous concert grands.

Engagements with the Boston Pops under Arthur Fiedler, at Hollywood Bowl and on Eastern television programs have come thick and fast since her return from a tour of Poland that blossomed out of what had been planned as only a brief visit.

In that nation where music is the national hobby, she became as celebrated as a movie star.

Tapes of three of her broadcasts for Radio Polski are still being played over the air and she has been invited back for another tour in the fall of this year; this time to include concerts in Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria and Russia.

At the Royal Theatre, the auburn-haired pianist who is noted for the brilliance and subtlety of her Chopin, will play a big Chopin group and a Liszt Hungarian Rhapsody as well as numbers by Bach, Mozart and Beethoven.

Tickets are on sale at Famous Artists box office at Kent's Ltd., Fort Street.

CBC Cuts Service To West Europe

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC has been instructed to stop its multi-language radio broadcasts to some parts of Western Europe and instead start beaming English and French language programs to Africa.

The switch has been ordered by the external affairs department following a cabinet decision to cut $500,000 from the $1,900,000 appropriation of the publicly owned corporation sought to operate its international service this year.

New Musical For Alfred Drake

Alfred Drake, best known as the stage's top singing actor but who often takes time out for straight drama or for directing, has been signed to do another musical for next season, his first since "Kismet" in 1953.

The new one will be a song version of "Kean," a play by France's Jean-Paul Sartre about the early 19th Century British actor Edmund Kean. George Forrest and Robert Wright who helped create "Kismet" and "Song of Norway," will provide the songs.

What's Ahead for Movies If Shock-Appeal Fades?

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Will 1961 be the year of decision for Hollywood and its apparent determination to make movies more adult-erous than ever?

High industry sources talk officially in cliché-coated denials. But officially they are seriously worried about charges of the Roman Catholic bishops and influential Protestant and Jewish clergymen. Says one top studio executive:

"The shock appeal of such raw films as Butterfield 8 and The Apartment have brought millions at the box-office, and now we have Lolita with us."

DOUBTS IT "Will the public buy a movie that deals with the sex relationship of a middle-aged man and a 12-year-old girl, no matter how artistically it is done? Personally, I doubt it."

The producer isn't against sex per se but believes that Hollywood has ill-timed its accent on adultery, homosexuality, dope and other frank screen themes.

"These are adult themes, but go to a movie house and try to find adults. The theatres are filled with impressionable teenagers. They're the bulk of the audience."

The executive started in the business as a theatre owner and recounts a personal experience as a parallel to what he thinks could happen to the movie industry.

"My theatre did a nice business on family pictures such as Andy Hardy and the like. Then one day we got greedy and brought a shocking exploitation on marijuana. It did double the business our family pictures had done, so we booked more of the same."

"It didn't take long for the shock appeal to wear off. Business dropped to nothing. Even worse, our cashier quit because her pastor had asked her to."

"Finally, we lost so much money that we boarded up the theatre—and last I heard it was still boarded up."

Poetry Contest Featured At Authors' Yule Party

Members of the poetry group, Canadian Authors' Association, held their annual Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Irene Chapman Benson, 1387 St. David Street.

Mrs. Clara Hill Maunsell, convenor, organized a poetry contest on "The Christmas Tree" with prizes awarded in the serious class to Robert Shanks and Miss Nellie Scowcroft.

Mrs. Marion Cooper and R. B. Brooks won the humorous class, with honorable mention for Eileen Paine, Muriel Millen, Mary Carr Wright and Bill Mawle.

Mrs. Benson and Clara White contributed original poems.

A. Symes of Vancouver Poetry Society spoke on "The

He guessed wrong the second time, too, and he was struck in the same area.

An investigation into the B.C. Social Welfare Department was sought today by Opposition Leader Robert Strachan.

His move came immediately after a statement from Ruby McKay explaining why she resigned as superintendent of child welfare for the provincial government. She cited inadequate funds and staff for restricting welfare work by the department.

Mr. Strachan said the CCF will ask for an inquiry by the standing committee on education and social welfare after the House opens Jan. 26.

"The Social Credit government stands accused of heartless indifference not only to needs of children who are dependent on them for attention and care, but in their whole attitude toward less fortunate members of our community," he said.

Miss McKay's statement is "a courageous public service," he added.

There was no immediate reaction from Welfare Minister Wesley Black on Miss McKay's statement, which appeared in Friday's Times.

Farm Experts Will Attend CD Course

Agricultural experts will attend a four-day civil defence orientation course to be held at the Empress Hotel, starting on January 24.

More than 43 agrolgists from all parts of the province are expected to attend the meeting sponsored by the B.C. Institute of Agrolgists.

Lecturers will include Dr. G. M. Shrum, Dr. G. A. Rowles, Dr. A. J. Wood and Dr. C. A. Hornby of the University of British Columbia; Dr. A. Kidd, B.C. department of agriculture; R. Tait, Vancouver; Dr. J. L. M. Whitebread, R. Bowering and J. A. Sadler, B.C. Departments of Social Welfare and Health Services; L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary.

In addition there will be several lectures from the Canadian Army and Provincial Civil Defence Organization.

'RUNAWAY' REACTION CAUSED FATAL BLAST

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP)—A runaway atomic reaction is suspected as the cause of the explosion which killed three servicemen at the National Reactor Testing Station Tuesday night. The Atomic Energy Commission said the men apparently were killed by the force of the explosion. A statement added that if the blast didn't immediately cause death, the high radiation level could have been fatal.

NIGERIAN MEETS DISCRIMINATION IN U.S.

'Eat Outside' Diplomat Told

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP)—A Nigerian diplomat said Friday he was told to eat outside when he went into a restaurant in Charlottesville, Va., for breakfast Thursday. C. C. Uchuno, second secretary of the Nigerian Embassy in Washington, said a restaurant employee put food and paper cup of coffee in a paper bag and told him to eat outside. He said he displayed his diplomatic identity card but again was asked to leave. "There was no place to eat outside," he said, "so I sat down in the restaurant and ate my breakfast. But when I asked for a second cup of coffee, I was refused."

THE KENNEDY STORY

By JOE McCARTHY
(Third In A Series)

The biggest part of the president's duties, Joseph P. Kennedy believes, is stepping into disputes between the secretary of state and the secretary of defence, or between the secretary of the treasury and the federal reserve system, or other battling government agencies, putting his fist down, and deciding what will be done.

The president must make his decision calmly and objectively, based on his own careful study of the issues, the senior Kennedy adds, without taking anybody else's word for it and without being influenced by personal feelings.

"Jack has that in him," Joe Kennedy said in November, 1960. "He'll make the decisions on his own knowledge, without letting anybody else do it for him."

Personal Task

If he didn't have that in him, if he was just a nice fellow with a nice way of getting along with people, I wouldn't have voted for him, even if he is my own son.

The confident and independent Jack Kennedy made it plain during his successful campaign that he is going into the presidency as his own boss.

His astonishing drive to the White House was a Kennedy personal operation rather than an enterprise of the Democratic national committee.

In 1959, when the Kennedy-for-president movement was shifting into high gear, this reporter asked the senator if he was planning to engage an experienced Democratic political expert as a campaign strategist.

Nobody Better

Kennedy shook his head and said, "I don't know anybody who can handle this thing better than I can handle it myself."

The Kennedy campaign machinery was operated under Jack's own constant supervision by four young men whose previous experience had been limited to the Kennedy senatorial races in Massachusetts in 1952 and 1958—Jack's brother, Bobby, Ted Sorensen, Lawrence O'Brien and Kenneth O'Donnell.

Many other Democrats worked hard for the cause, of course, but this small inner circle of tried and true disciples from the previous Kennedy campaigns made the important decisions, clearing everything with Jack himself.

Trouble Discounted

Because Kennedy is a lone operator rather than a party politician, he is expected as president to have trouble with Congress. But Kennedy himself doubts this.

He points out that he knows Congress better than most presidents in recent years because he enters the White House from 14 years in the House and the Senate. He also regards himself as a good politician who can talk with politicians in their own language—even if he is not a strong party man.

"Eisenhower had trouble with Congress because he had no taste or liking for the political manoeuvring that you have to use in dealing with legislators," the next president once said. "Somebody once

Smoking in Bed Blamed For City Fire Fatality

... perished in bedroom

A fire believed caused by smoking in bed took the life of Katherine Senkbeil, 44, of 169 Beechwood, late Friday afternoon.

It was Victoria's first fire death this year.

The woman, a practical nurse at Mount St. Mary Hospital, apparently perished in her smoke and flame-filled bedroom after she collapsed trying to get to a window.

The tragedy was discovered shortly after 6 p.m. by Donald L. McLarty, the house owner who lived with the deceased, when he arrived home from his shipyard job—carrying a present of a new spring coat.

Entering the gas and smoke-filled house four times in an effort to save the woman, he finally got lost, stumbled and fell his way out then ran a block to pull a fire alarm box at Wildwood and Ross.

"Just the bed was on fire when I first went in," McLarty said today.

He searched in the smoke and could not find the nurse. "The fourth time I went in I got lost," he said.

Electric lights were out because of the fire.

Rescue Attempt on Hands and Knees

On his hands and knees, McLarty tried for the final time to make a rescue.

"I thought I wasn't going to get out again—I felt my way along the chesterfield back to the door."

Unable to use the telephone because of the smoke, McLarty ran to the alarm box. He knew where to find it because there had once been a chimney fire at his house, he said.

City firemen Allan Duval, Lieut. Alfred Perry and Assistant Chief James Robertson went in without respirators as soon as they arrived. They carried the woman to a front porch and administered oxygen to the badly-burned victim.

With firemen working on her en route, police ambulance took her to Royal Jubilee Hospital, where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

Laos Will Admit Truce Commission

10 Killed In Algeria Vote Clash

ALGIERS (Reuters)—About 10 persons were killed today when Moslems and French troops clashed in southern Algeria where army trucks were waiting to drive Moslems to vote in President de Gaulle's Algerian self-determination referendum.

Moslems voted in large numbers in most areas. Officials said the atmosphere was calm except for the clash in the town of Aflou in which a French soldier and about nine Moslems were killed.

Unofficial reports in Paris said five Moslems were killed Friday, the first of three days of voting on de Gaulle's referendum.

Officials said the insurgent Algerian National Liberation Front (FLN) threatened "bloody" reprisals in the Aflou area toward Moslems who defied its order to boycott the vote.

FLN URGES BOYCOTT

The FLN called on Moslems to boycott voting on the referendum in which a "yes" vote is in favor of de Gaulle continuing his plan to grant Algeria greater autonomy immediately and eventually for Europeans and Moslems to vote on its future political status.

Moslems turned out in strength in many areas today, reports said, but in eastern Algeria their numbers varied widely from one area to another.

In Guelma, eastern Algeria, Moslem storekeepers staged a strike today.

Voting was in countryside areas Friday; today it was in small towns. Sunday the voters in Algerian cities get their chance.

Moslem storekeepers in the western city of Oran staged a strike.

Friday's vote has not been tallied, but observers expected the rural population to turn in a large majority for de Gaulle. De Gaulle hopes to gain a massive popular mandate for his program.

PRAYER FOR TODAY

Our heavenly Father, make us conscious of Thy presence every hour of the day. Help us to go among our fellow men, not in sadness and fear, but with cheerfulness and kind faces. Enable us to be a blessing to all those who are fighting a hard battle. In our relations with others may we have more of the wisdom of the Master, Christ, and something of His courage and compassion. In His name we pray. Amen.

SOVIET HALTS AIRLIFT TO LAOS REBEL FORCES

NEW YORK (AP)—NBC said today a senior Soviet diplomat in Bangkok, Thailand, reported that Soviet planes are stopping their airlift to Laotian rebels.

A Bangkok dispatch from NBC correspondent James Robinson quoted the diplomat as saying the airlift is ending because Moscow feels Laotian civil war must be solved by negotiations rather than fighting.

RALLY OPENS MONDAY

Unemployment Main Topic For Liberals

OTTAWA (CP)—A list of proposals for giving the lagging economy a transfusion of pep, including tax cuts and a major urban development plan, are expected to come from next week's national Liberal rally.

Walter Gordon, who will be policy committee chairman at the three-day convention, said unemployment is the main concern of some 400 resolutions that will be considered by party delegates starting Monday.

It would not provide employment immediately since prior planning would be necessary, said Mr. Gordon, who was chairman of the royal commission on Canada's economic prospects several years ago. But that planning should begin now.

Other resolutions call for tax cuts, propose incentives to the establishment of industries in depressed areas—measures which would be more effective than the recent budget proposals of Finance Minister Fleming, he said.

RESOLUTIONS CRITICAL

A number of resolutions were "bitterly critical" of the government for tight money, high interest rates and the recent high exchange premium on the Canadian dollar. All of these, he said, have slowed the country's growth.

Party officials say more than 2,000 delegates and Liberal party supporters are expected to attend the rally at the Coliseum, a venerable red brick building at Lansdowne Park, which still holds a pervading odor of horses from the recent Ottawa Winter Fair held there.

The national rally was preceded by the Canadian University Liberal convention in the same building today.

Some 400 students attended from 43 universities and colleges across the country.

Conditional Offer Made

VIENTIANE (Reuters)—The right-wing government of civil war-torn Laos said today it is willing to consider the revival of a three-nation international commission to help bring peace to the Southeast Asian country.

This international truce supervisory commission for Laos was set up by the 1954 Geneva conference that ended the war in Indochina between French and Communist guerrillas.

The commission, charged with keeping the peace in this tiny kingdom, was adjourned indefinitely in July, 1958. Its three members are India (chairman), Canada and Poland.

Foreign Affairs Secretary Chao Somsaisana said Laotian approval for a revival of the commission was conditional on agreement by the members of the Geneva conference.

Red Troops Advance On Capital

VIENTIANE (AP)—A column of leftist troops was reported advancing on Luang Prabang today from the north. Reports varied, however, as to whether the Laotian royal capital was imminently threatened.

French sources said the threat to Luang Prabang was increasing. Other Western military men placed the column still 60 miles north of the city and said it was in no immediate danger.

The more optimistic view seemed to be shared by King Savang Vathana. He took off today from Vientiane for Luang Prabang after earlier delays that raised questions about the security of the city.

CLAIM BASE CAPTURED

Information Minister Douvan Norasing claimed today the important pro-Communist rebel base of Vang Vieng, 65 air miles north Vientiane, was captured by government forces Thursday.

Front-line officers told an Associated Press correspondent, however, Vang Vieng was still in pro-Communist hands today.

The correspondent drove to front lines midway between Vientiane and Vang Vieng. Government armies appeared to be making little headway in their march on Vang Vieng, which they started three weeks ago.

The king came to this administrative capital to officiate at the formal installation of the rightist government of Prince Boun Oum.

'Retreat' By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has told friendly nations it is willing to accept a broader-based non-Communist government in Laos, including former Premier Souvanna Phouma, provided the move is acceptable to King Savang Vathana and pro-Western Premier Boun Oum.

Top U.S. officials made this known Friday after the Soviet Union was reported to have turned down a British peace formula which would have called for Soviet recognition of the newly-invested Boun Oum government.

All Parties Desperate for Esquimalt-Saanich Federal Seat

Local politicians are preparing for one of the hottest federal by-election fights in B.C. history when the poll for the Esquimalt-Saanich seat is called.

The announcement by Prime Minister Diefenbaker last week that there would not be a general election this year has cleared the decks and observers believe the by-election will be called for late March or early April.

The Progressive Conservatives of the riding have arranged a meeting for Tuesday at which they will set a date for a nomination meeting.

Meantime, they have set a campaign in motion to draft Reeve George Chatterton of Saanich as their candidate. However, he will have at least two opponents for the nomination in Cecil W. Holmes, former federal organizer for the party, and John C. B. Keane, an Oak Bay engineer.

But when the battle lines are finally set and the candidates chosen, the organizers here are predicting that most of the big guns on the Canadian political scene will take part in the campaign.

Each of the four major parties is desperately anxious to win the seat.

Here, briefly, is the way the underlying thinking of the parties is analyzed:

● Progressive Conservatives: The seat as it now exists was formed in a redistribution in 1952 and has been held ever since by General George

Peakes, whose appointment as lieutenant-governor caused the vacancy. He also held the Nanaimo portion of the riding for seven years before that time, so the Conservatives have a 15-year record in the seat.

In addition, since the seat was held by a cabinet minister, the government will go all out to maintain the prestige which will go with holding it in the Conservative column. Particularly is this so because of the setbacks the government suffered in the fall-by-elections in the east.

● The Liberal party is keenly anxious to get a toe-hold back in the west. After the 1958 debacle the party does not hold a single seat in the Commons, west of the Great Lakes.

Next week in Ottawa the Liberals will hold their "grass roots" rally to rebuild the party fortunes and it is quite likely Esquimalt-Saanich will provide first testing ground for public acceptance of their plans. They are pinning their hopes on retired naval captain David Gros.

● The New Party (combining CCF and the trades unions) will be facing its first test west of Ontario under the changed label.

The new political movement has taken heart through the victory of Walter Pitman in the Peterborough by-election in the fall and will wage an all-out campaign to put Glen Hamilton, a social worker turned politician, into office.

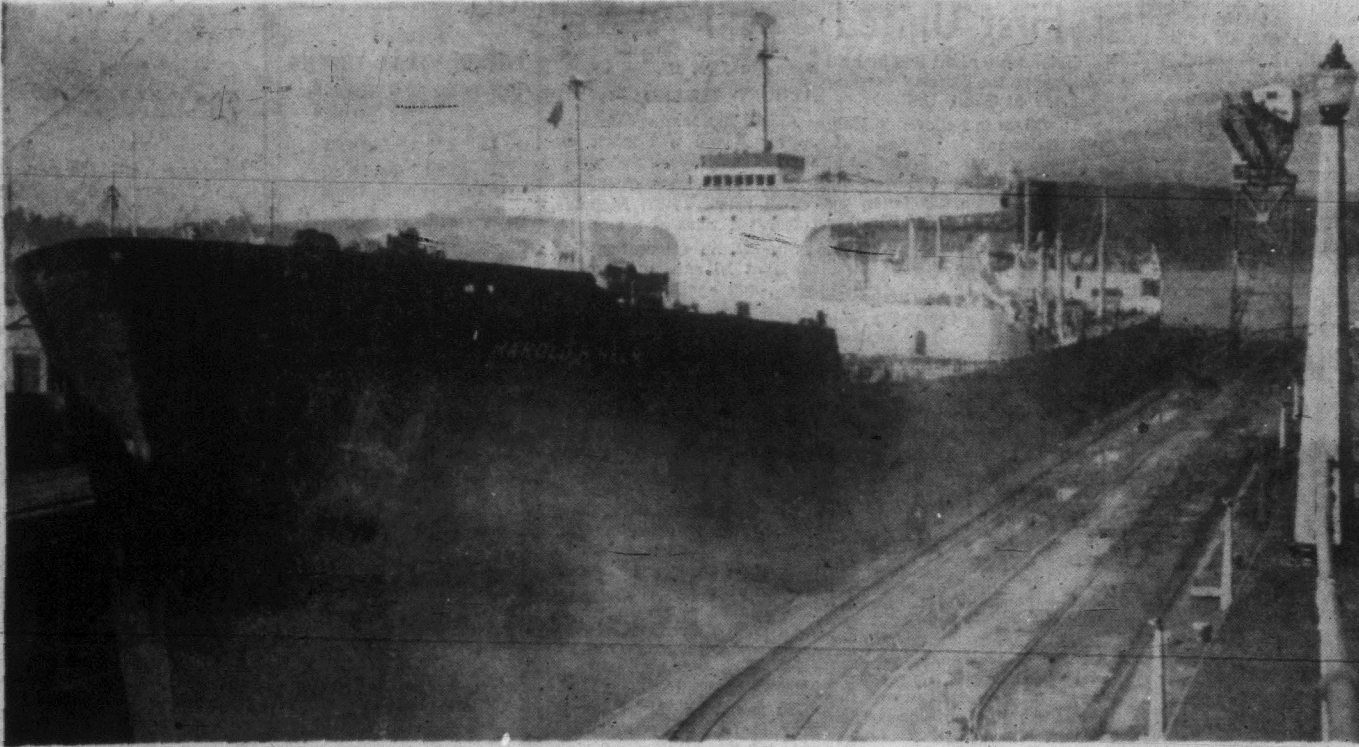

The CCF party has held sections of the riding in the provincial field over the last 20 years and hopes this can be turned to account in its federal movement.

● Social Credit hopes to use the seat as a springboard to a revival of its national aspirations. Social Credit was completely wiped out of Parliament in the 1958 election, but since then Premier Bennett and its other leaders have indicated they do not intend to remain purely a provincial political phenomena and will use the first available opportunity to get back into the national picture. They have yet to choose a candidate but promise a "strong one."

As an added zest to the by-election there are two minor party candidates already announced—Norman Baker of New Westminster as a United Empire Loyalist and Don Poirier of the Socialist Party of Canada.

All in all it adds up to a hard-fought political scrap.

MUCH-NEEDED INFUSION FOR Victoria's anaemic shipyard payrolls started with the arrival here of the giant, world-girdling tanker Harold H. Helm, for survey, painting, and any necessary repairs. Yarrows Ltd. will employ 200 men for at least five days, for a payroll in excess of $25,000—a lot of money for the workmen, but "peanuts" to the big ship, which earns more than

$10,000 a day when working, and a thundering "zero" when in port for repairs. Thus it's a round-the-clock operation, and overtime is of no consequence. Yarrows officials, who in recent years have put on a big drive to bring the supertankers into Government Graving Dock, hope the Helm is the first of at least 10 tankers to come here this year. OUR VERY OWN GARDENING GUIDE
(So you thought it was too early, eh? edition.)

One of the first things the non-gardener must learn, in this, the fairest city of them all, is that it is never too early to start avoiding gardening.

In most other Canadian locales the ardent non-gardener can relax at this time of the year, look out his picture window at a picture of perfect peace—the soil lying dormant under a blanket of snow, the flowering shrubs sensibly shielding their bare limbs and snuggling together for protection from the cold.

In those more-favored climes, the non-gardener need not worry about not doing any gardening until April, or perhaps May, or even—blessed thought—June.

But here in this, the Fairest City of Them All, the Non-Gardener is put to the test even before the middle of January has muddled.

Right now, as the rains come down, thus enriching the all-too-fertile soil and causing small encroachments of new tendrils to creep up toward the sky, the Non-Gardener has to start thinking of reasons why he is not tending his garden.

It is not enough to say the soil is too wet to work.

It is not enough to go out into the garden and say to the new tendrils: "Go back, you fools, it ain't time yet."

It is not enough to say to all who will listen: "I'd love to get out there and dig, but I always have lumbago, a sore back, and multifold congestions of the chest at this time of year."

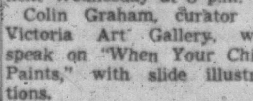

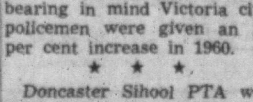

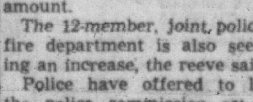

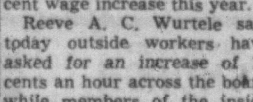

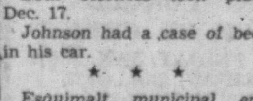

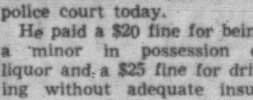

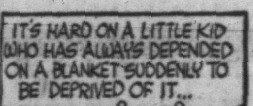

It doesn't even work to say you are going to Honolulu on a winter vacation, because the non-gardener would have to bed down the plants, arrange for their care and feeding, and report his absence to the horticultural society before leaving.

The only solution Our Very Own Gardening Guide can offer is this:

Four kerosene over the whole garden and set a match to it.

Mind you, the rain will put the fire out, but at least the eager-beaver tendrils will be discouraged for a short time.

(For more advice, wait until the tendrils become undisciplined.)

LUMBERMEN PLANNING OFFICE IN AUSTRALIA

The British Columbia Lumber Manufacturers' Association announced today it is opening an office in Australia and increasing the staff of its London office.

It said the appointments are further steps in the association's campaign to increase acceptance of B.C. lumber products in the United Kingdom and Australia.

Barrie Ford, a professional forester with extensive experience in lumber sales, production, grading and management, will open the association's first Australian office since before the Second World War.

R. C. Bennet, an architect, and W. E. Townsley, who has a broad background in retailing, forestry and mill management, will join the association's staff in London.

OAK BAY ASSAULT

Woman Loses Purse, Gets Finger Broken

Oak Bay housekeeper Mrs. Minnie Carroll, 60, of 2524 Esplanade, lost her purse containing $145 and broke a finger when she struggled with an assailant at the rear of her home Friday at 8:45 p.m.

Police said the woman—just paid her salary—was in a narrow walkway connecting the home of W. W. Webster, 2524 Esplanade, with Beach Drive near Estevan.

It is believed the man had been prowling the area and attacked Mrs. Carroll on the spur of the moment, perhaps when she surprised him.

She was treated for her fracture and bruises at Royal Jubilee Hospital and discharged.

Mrs. Carroll said the man, who she described as well-dressed, came up in the dark "from nowhere" and asked if there was a way through her property. She said no, and he grabbed the purse.

"All I could do was hang on and scream. Then I lost my balance and fell."

The woman was dragged about 10 feet until her purse handle broke and the man ran away with the purse. Besides the money, it contained eyeglasses and papers.

A neighbor told police he heard the woman's screams and when he went to look he saw a man get in a car and drive away from Beach at Estevan.

A film showing the progress made by Russia in the field of power will be shown members of Victoria Electric Club at their next meeting in the Net Loft, noon Tuesday.

It was made by a sub-committee of the U.S. Senate in the spring of 1960 and covers the power installations in the USSR.

Police said Houston was crossing Cook in a crosswalk at 5:15 p.m. when the accident happened.

He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Henry Deacon, 850 Seymour, was checked at St. Joseph's for minor injuries, then transferred to HMCS Naden Hospital after his car was in collision with a truck at 8:12 a.m. today.

Saanich police said the truck, owned by Heaney's, was driven by Ronald Charles Barry, 42 Howe.

Total damage was estimated at $750.

Esquimalt municipal employees are asking a 5 per cent wage increase this year.

Reeve A. C. Wurtelle said today outside workers have asked for an increase of 10 cents an hour across the board, while members of the inside staff have asked for a similar amount.

The 12-member, joint, police-fire department is also seeking an increase, the reeve said. Police have offered to let the police commission set a figure to start negotiations bearing in mind Victoria city policemen were given an 11 per cent increase in 1960.

Doncaster School PTA will meet in the school auditorium next Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Collin Graham, curator at Victoria Art Gallery, will speak on "When Your Child Paints," with slide illustrations.

It had a stormy childhood, he says, and most people either liked it or hated it.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, JANUARY 7, 1961—PAGE 15

Longer Scenic Drive Planned

Saanich this year may go ahead with a plan to extend Marine Drive from Cadboro Bay to the boundary of Central Saanich.

Reeve George Chatterton said today he will propose to council a survey be conducted to determine the route for the extension of the scenic thoroughfare.

Marine drive which starts from the city now ends at Cadboro Bay.

AROUND PENINSULA

It had been proposed by the Capital Region Planning Board that the drive be constructed around the Saanich Peninsula, but the project so far has made no headway beyond Cadboro Bay.

"Once the survey is completed we can tackle the problem of funds for its development," the reeve said. "It may be a good project for the Capital Improvement District Commission to undertake."

The big hitch to extending the drive beyond Saanich, the reeve said, is the matter of costs to survey the route through Central Saanich and beyond that.

COST-SHARING

The provincial government, he said, has been asked to share the costs to survey the route through Central Saanich.

He said Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi has agreed to look into the matter.

"I believe we should do all we can to complete the Marine Drive project as soon as possible," the reeve said. "It would be a wonderful asset to the Greater Victoria area and Saanich Peninsula."

FAMILY REUNION FOR EARLY-DAY MECHANIC

'Pop' Shanks Grew Old With Motor Cars

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Richard (Pop) Shanks—one of the world's first motor mechanics—is 85 today.

He opened a bicycle store in 1903 and the following year hung out a sign, "Motor Cars Repaired." And he's been busy with motors ever since.

At his home at 1041 Holmes Street today, Mr. Shanks looked back through a maze of memories to the earliest days of the automobile.

It had a stormy childhood, he says, and most people either liked it or hated it.

He recalls how an elderly cyclist came into his store and said: "Do you think they will ever make a success of these blasted machines?"

Mr. Shanks said he thought they would, to which the veteran replied: "Well, I can tell you this—there'll be wholesale slaughter on our highways when they do."

Those were the days when owners of large estates hung out signs at the gates: "No automobiles allowed inside."

Motorists wore goggles and leggings and their lady passengers covered their heads with dust covers.

Mr. Shanks operated a motorcycle store at 837 Fort Street, which is now carried on by his son, Reginald.

He was practically born into the bicycle trade. His parents opened a bike store at Chertsey, Surrey, England, in 1884, and the same year his brother started a bicycle factory.

After serving his apprenticeship in the family store, Mr. Shanks went to Weybridge in 1903, and opened the store which was to become one of England's very first garages.

It still bears his name although he sold out and emigrated to Canada in 1917. He went to Vancouver because he heard it was a virgin field for mechanics and managed a garage there for about a year.

Moving to Victoria in 1912, he worked in a garage for a while and then jumped at the chance of starting his own motorcycle shop.

He was a co-founder and charter member of Victoria Motorcycle Club in 1912 and later was one of three trail-breakers who rode the first motor bikes over the rugged Cariboo Trail.

Until his retirement, Mr. Shanks rode to work daily on a heavy police motorcycle. He still rides down to the store.

Because police motorcycles are hard to "kick off," Mr. Shanks developed his own self-starter for the bike and this enables him to fire the engine by pressing a button.

This evening there will be a family reunion in which Mr. and Mrs. Shanks will be joined by their sons, Reg and Robert, and their daughter, Margot, who is Mrs. Frank Boughton.

Surprise! The government has actually reduced a tax. It's the schedule of fees for motor carriers—buses, trucks, taxis and freight haulers.

Average reduction is 10 per cent, but big buses carrying more than 21 persons will get a licence for $48 instead of $72 after March 1. Big trucks carrying more than 18,000 pounds which were $48 will also be $42.

The reason: the motor carrier branch's revenue was so good there was a small surplus.

Education Minister Leslie Peterson has passed out sections of the Chant Commission report to his staff with orders to investigate and recommend if its recommendations should be put into effect.

The fan mail, meanwhile, is pouring in. "I'm getting lots of letters," says Mr. Peterson. "They comment both ways."

Actually, he's pretty pleased with the report.

Orders, particularly from school districts, are coming into the Queen's Printer's, where 5,000 copies are being prepared for sale about Jan. 15 at $3 plus 15 cents tax. Nothing's cut, but the original 845 pages have been trimmed to 470 by using smaller type size.

Appointed to the B.C. Research Council is deputy lands minister E. W. Bassett, B.C.'s top technical negotiator in Columbia River matters. He's got the extra job until June 30, 1963.

Also on the board now, as permanent ex officio member, is deputy trade minister T. L. Sturgess.

Also appointed: James R. Edgett of North Vancouver to the Labor Relations Board and Board of Industrial Relations. He's an employer representative and formerly was a labor relations consultant before taking a post with the Canadian Manufacturers' Association last September.

If you don't like your coffin you can get your money back, says the B.C. Public Utilities Commission.

A new order says firms which supply burial necessities must refund money to clients who change their minds.

Refund for Gulf Islands Ferry operators is being made by the government to the tune of $2,322.40 for wharfage charges assessed on extra trips among the islands.

Something special for Vancouver Island's Strathcona Park would be welcomed this year—50th anniversary of the province's public parks. March 1, 1911, Strathcona became the B.C. government's first park. Now there are 165, totalling 8,423,736 acres.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

Friday the Thirteenth comes early but not very often in 1961.

The first finger-crossing Friday, when ladders and black cats send strong men rushing for shelter, comes next week.

The second, and only other, day when the superstitious should have stayed in bed is in October.

A burglar thoroughly ransacked a Willow's district home Friday night, apparently without stealing anything.

W. E. Enoch, 2072 Newton, told Oak Bay police he was out from 8:11.45 p.m., neglecting to lock the front door.

Someone entered, looked through all drawers, cupboards and purses; evidently in a search for money.

F. G. Bass will speak concerning "Art in High Schools and Art Careers" at the meeting of Mount View High PTA, Monday, 8 p.m., at the school.

Victoria's well-known vocal group, the Meistersingers, will be heard on CBU radio from Vancouver tonight at 9:30.

The choir, under the conductors of Ted Boulden, will open the CBC's regular seasonal program, Parade of Choirs.

Four films from a series "Eight Steps to Peace," with a commentary by actor Raymond Massey, will be shown in the Newstead Hall, Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The showing has been organized by the World Federalists of Canada, Victoria branch. David P. Reimer will preside and conduct a discussion period after the films. The public is invited.

Don Poirier, Socialist Party candidate in the Esquimalt-Saanich by-election, will open his campaign at Speakers' Corner, Beacon Hill Park, this Sunday at 2 p.m.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Could you please tell me what Trans-Canada Air Lines is going to do with the DC-3s recently retired from the Victoria-Vancouver run? N.S.

A. One has already been sold to an unidentified Eastern Canadian business organization; the other three have or will be ferried to Lethbridge for storage pending sale soon. Sale is expected to other carriers, in Canada.

Missing Island Trapper Hunted

VANCOUVER (CP)—The RCAF Search and Rescue Service said today ground parties are searching dense bush on the northwestern tip of Vancouver Island for a missing Quasino fur trapper.

The unidentified man is reported two weeks overdue. An Otter aircraft was forced to return to Sea Island because of flying conditions but an Albatross would resume the search Sunday.

The ground searchers will trace 60 miles of trap lines west of Holberg.

Blue Scout Missile Hurdled in Space

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI)—The air force today successfully fired a Blue Scout rocket into space with instruments to study radiation hazards confronting manned flights to the moon and planets.

The 72-foot vehicle, heaviest solid-fueled rocket ever launched from the cape, apparently worked to perfection. It was not designed to go into orbit.

Canucks Loan Wilkie to Seattle

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver Canucks have loaned forward Murray Wilkie to rival Seattle Totems for the remainder of the Western Hockey League season.

Addition of rookie defenceman Emile Gillies to the lineup meant that Vancouver's roster was overcrowded and prompted coach Art Chapman to send Wilkie to Seattle.

Probe Ordered Into Missile Strike

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.), today ordered a full-scale staff investigation of delays caused by wildcat strikes and other work stoppages at Cape Canaveral, Fla., and other big missile bases.

McClellan, chairman of the senate permanent investigating subcommittee, said information from preliminary inquiries shows that millions of dollars have been lost with a "possible serious blow" to U.S. missile progress through work delays.

Policeman Loses Ear to Berserk Man

Welsh was taken to the Toronto General Hospital where the ear was sewn back on, but doctors said the graft would not take.

Detroit Wins Pro Football Clash

MIAMI—Detroit Lions defeated Cleveland Browns 17-16 in today's professional football clash between the second place finishers in the two divisions of the National Football League.

Return-to-Work Surge in Belgium

BRUSSELS (AP)—Leaders of Belgium's nation-wide strike appealed to workers today to stay off the job. A cabinet spokesman predicted a wide-spread return to work Monday.

The spokesman for Premier Gaston Eyskens's government said: "Things are quiet in Liege. No new serious incidents have been reported there."

In Liege Friday 75 persons were injured—11 critically—as a mob of 1,600 battled soldiers, policemen and firemen.

The situation in other parts of the country:

Antwerp—Seven ships entered the harbor in the night. Oil refineries and gasoline distributors are resuming work Monday. More teachers will return to schools.

Ghent—With some street cars and buses running, the Socialist Transport Workers Union ordered a return to work Monday.

Brussels—mostly quiet, but at the university, students belonging to the Liberal party said a "handful of Socialist and Communists" were trying to block classroom entrances.

The position of King Baudouin was not clear.

He was first reported planning a new round of conferences with business and labor leaders in hopes of mediating the strike. But sources close to the throne said the young monarch had no plans to receive any official visitors this weekend.

Many observers believed Friday's wild rioting in Liege was the last violent outburst in the 19 days of tension which the Socialist newspaper Le Peuple said has cost the nation $200,000,000 francs ($180,000,000).

10 Killed In Algeria Vote Clash

ALGIERS (Reuters)—About 10 persons were killed today when Moslems and French troops clashed in southern Algeria where army trucks were waiting to drive Moslems to vote in President de Gaulle's Algerian self-determination referendum.

Moslems voted in large numbers in most areas. Officials said the atmosphere was calm except for the clash in the town of Afjou in which a French soldier and about nine Moslems were killed.

Unofficial reports in Paris said five Moslems were killed Friday, the first of three days of voting on de Gaulle's referendum.

Officials said the insurgent Algerian National Liberation Front (FLN) threatened "bloody" reprisals in the Afjou area toward Moslems who defied its order to boycott the vote.

FLN URGES BOYCOTT

The FLN called on Moslems to boycott voting on the referendum in which a "yes" vote is in favor of de Gaulle, continuing his plan to grant Algeria greater autonomy immediately and eventually for Europeans.

THE KENNEDY STORY

By JOE MCCARTHY
(Third In A Series)

The biggest part of the president's duties, Joseph P. Kennedy believes, is stepping into disputes between the secretary of state and the secretary of defence, or between the secretary of the treasury and the federal reserve system, or other battling government agencies, putting his fist down, and deciding what will be done.

The president must make his decision calmly and objectively, based on his own careful study of the issues, the senior Kennedy adds, without taking anybody else's word for it and without being influenced by personal feelings.

"Jack has that in him," Joe Kennedy said in November, 1960. "He'll make the decisions on his own knowledge, without letting anybody else do it for him."

Personal Task

If he didn't have that in him, if he was just a nice fellow with a nice way of getting along with people, I wouldn't have voted for him, even if he is my own son.

The confident and independent Jack Kennedy made it plain during his successful campaign that he is going into the presidency as his own boss.

In 1959, when the Kennedy-for-president movement was shifting into high gear, this reporter asked the senator if he was planning to engage an experienced Democratic political expert as a campaign strategist.

Kennedy shook his head and said, "I don't know anybody who can handle this thing better than I can handle it myself."

The Kennedy campaign machinery was operated under Jack's own constant supervision by four young men whose previous experience had been limited to the Kennedy senatorial races in Massachusetts in 1952 and 1958—Jack's brother, Bobby, Ted Sorensen, Lawrence O'Brien and Kenneth O'Donnell.

Many other Democrats worked hard for the cause, of course, but this small inner circle of tried and true disciples from the previous Kennedy campaigns made the important decisions, clearing everything with Jack himself.

Trouble Discounted

Because Kennedy is a lone operator rather than a party politician, he is expected as president to have troubles with Congress. But Kennedy himself doubts this.

He points out that he knows Congress better than most presidents in recent years because he enters the White House from 14 years in the House and the Senate. He also regards himself as a good politician who can talk with politicians in their own language—even if he is not a strong party man.

"Eisenhower had trouble with Congress because he had no taste or liking for the political manoeuvring that you have to use in dealing with legislators," the next president once said. "Somebody once Continued on Page 2"

Smoking in Bed Blamed For City Fire Fatality

KATHERINE SENKBEIL
... perished in bedroom

Canada's Extremes

"Too bad th' Council seems resigned t' th' fact th' th' Arena Commission hasn't."

"Them Algerians do a lot o' shootin' at their elections, but they do turn out."

"Nobody seems quite clear what th' Belgian strike's about—an' th'et may include a few Belgians."

A fire believed caused by smoking in bed took the life of Katherine Senkbeil, 44, of 169 Beechwood, late Friday afternoon.

It was Victoria's first fire death this year.

The woman, a practical nurse at Mount St. Mary Hospital, apparently perished in her smoke and flame-filled bedroom after she collapsed trying to get to a window.

The tragedy was discovered shortly after 6 p.m. by Donald L. McLarty, the house owner who lived with the deceased, when he arrived home from his shipyard job—carrying a present of a new spring coat.

Entering the gas and smoke-filled house four times in an effort to save the woman, he finally got lost, stumbled and felt his way out then ran a block to pull a fire alarm box at Wildwood and Ross.

"Just the bed was on fire when I first went in," McLarty said today.

He searched in the smoke and could not find the nurse.

"The fourth time I went in I got lost," he said.

Electric lights were out because of the fire.

Rescue Attempt on Hands and Knees

On his hands and knees, McLarty tried for the final time to make a rescue.

"I thought I wasn't going to get out again—I felt my way along the chesterfield back to the door."

Unable to use the telephone

City firemen Allan Duval, Lieut. Alfred Perry and Assistant Chief James Robertson went in without respirators as soon as they arrived.

They carried the woman to a front porch and administered oxygen to the badly-burned victim.

With firemen working on her en route, police ambulance took her to Royal Jubilee Hospital, where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

Loss was estimated at $10,000.

Big Rally Opens In East Monday

OTTAWA (CP)—A list of proposals for giving the lagging economy a transfusion of pep, including tax cuts and a major urban development plan, are expected to come from next week's national Liberal rally.

Walter Gordon, who will be policy committee chairman at the three-day convention, said unemployment is the main concern of some 400 resolutions that will be considered by party delegates starting Monday.

It would not provide employment immediately since prior planning would be necessary, said Mr. Gordon, who was chairman of the royal commission on Canada's economic prospects several years ago. But that planning should begin now.

Other resolutions call for tax cuts, propose incentives to the establishment of industries in depressed areas—measures which would be more effective than the recent budget proposals of Finance Minister Fleming, he said.

A number of resolutions were "bitterly critical" of the government for tight money, high interest rates and the recent high-exchange premium on the Canadian dollar. All of these, he said, have slowed the country's growth.

Party officials say more than 2,000 delegates and Liberal party supporters are expected to attend the rally at the Coliseum, a venerable red brick building at Lansdowne Park which still holds a pervading odor of horses from the recent Ottawa Winter Fair held there.

The national rally was preceded by the Canadian University Liberal convention in the same building today.

Some 400 students attended from 43 universities and colleges across the country.

CONDITIONAL OFFER

Laos Will Admit Truce Officials

VIENTIANE (Reuters)—The right-wing government of civil war-torn Laos said today it is willing to consider the revival of a three-nation international commission to help bring peace to the Southeast Asian country.

This international truce supervisory commission for Laos was set up by the 1954 Geneva conference that ended the war in Indochina between French and Communist guerrillas.

The commission, charged with keeping the peace in this tiny kingdom, was adjourned indefinitely in July, 1958. Its three members are India (chairman), Canada and Poland.

Foreign Affairs Secretary

'Retreat' By U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has told friendly nations it is willing to accept a broader-based non-Communist government in Laos, including former Premier Souvanna Phouma, provided the move is acceptable to King Savang Vathana and pro-Western Premier Boun Oum.

Top U.S. officials made this known Friday after the Soviet Union was reported to have turned down a British peace formula which would have called for Soviet recognition of the newly-invested Boun Oum government.

Red Troops Advance On Capital

VIENTIANE (AP)—A column of leftist troops was reported advancing on Luang Prabang today from the north. Reports varied, however, as to whether the Lao-Lao royal capital was imminently threatened.

French sources said the threat to Luang Prabang was increasing. Other Western military men placed the column still 60 miles north of the city and said it was in no immediate danger.

The more optimistic view seemed to be shared by King Savang Vathana. He took off today from Vientiane for Luang Prabang after earlier delays that raised questions about the security of the city.

CLAIM BASE CAPTURED

Information Minister Doua-van Norasing claimed today the important pro-Communist rebel base of Vang Vieng, 65 miles north Vientiane, was captured by government forces Thursday.

Front-line officers told an Associated Press correspondent, however, Vang Vieng was still in pro-Communist hands today.

The correspondent drove to front lines midway between Vientiane and Vang Vieng. Government armies appeared to be making little headway in their march on Vang Vieng, which they started three weeks ago.

The king came to this administrative capital to officiate at the formal installation of the rightist government of Prince Boun Oum.

Dag Protests

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld has sent a second protest to Belgium for letting Congolese troops operate from the Belgian administered UN trust territory of Ruanda-Urundi, it was disclosed today.

SOVIET HALTS AIRLIFT TO LAOS REBEL FORCES

NEW YORK (AP)—NBC said today a senior Soviet diplomat in Bangkok, Thailand, reported that Soviet planes are stopping their airlift to Laotian rebels.

A Bangkok dispatch from NBC correspondent James Robinson quoted the diplomat as saying the airlift is ending because Moscow feels Laotian civil war must be solved by negotiations rather than fighting.
